7700 Planes Indicated As Output For August

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Aircraft production jumped 4 per cent over July levels last month to a new high of about 7700 airplanes, preliminary figures indicated yesterday.

It is understood that high officials of the War Production Board are elated with the August record, particularly because gains were registered all along the line.

A total of 7373 planes were produced in July, according to final figures released by WPB. The preliminary August figures are subject to correction after a final check with all production reports—a few of which have not been received yet.

If the upward trend indicated by the August increase over July continues at the same rate, informed officials anticipate the manufacture of more than 8000 planes this month.

Progress Satisfies Officials

Officials do not interpret the figures as indicating that the aircraft production problem is licked, but they are well-satisfied with progress. However, they point out that it will represent a continued uphill climb to get further production increases.

War Production Board Chairman Donald M. Nelson and WPB Chairman Charles E. Wilson asserted that further production increases would be secured "only by the most determined effort," when they announced the July figures—an increase of a similar 4 per cent over June levels.

Plans to set up far-reaching production and manpower controls on the West Coast are being pushed to make possible further aircraft production expansion.

Byrnes Session Slated Today

James F. Byrnes' War Mobilization Committee is slated to meet on the problem today—to evolve a policy decision to guide all agencies of Government.

Byrnes will have before him information indicating that organized labor is hostile to phases of the West Coast program calling for the establishment of hiring controls over all male workers and the determination of labor priorities by an intergovernmental group of officials. West Coast management is also understood to be lukewarm to certain phases of the program.

Reflecting management and labor attitudes, the War Manpower Commission Management-Labor Policy Committee voted unanimously this week requesting Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt to defer action on the program until alternative plans can be developed by existing West Coast management-labor committees.

Labor officials contend that the problem can be solved without placing additional governmental controls on the region by providing adequate draft protection to key workers, by restricting nonessential manufacturing activities, and by concentrating on questions of housing and community facilities which are creating undesirable working conditions and contributing to labor turnover.

Both the final July and preliminary August aircraft figures represent a production record substantially below set schedules, but the increase from July to August was the same percentage rise called for by the schedule.

However, officials do not believe the set schedules are realistic. They have been trimmed several times to bring them into line with possible expectations, but officials still believe them to be too high.

One official said: "I'd rather make 8500 planes of the type we need than to meet schedules which include many types we don't need."

Design changes, both in individual planes and in elimination of unwanted types of planes was one factor preventing plane production from rising further, it was said.

"We got the planes we wanted," one WPB executive said, "and those we didn't get, we did not want."

Meat Point Values to Drop; Butter, Frozen Foods to Rise

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

To meet changes in the food supply situation, the Office of Price Administration yesterday announced lowered point values for meats and an increase in points required for butter, canned fruits and frozen foods, effective next Sunday.

Sirloin steak and rib roasts, as well as most lamb cuts and variety meats, will go down one point on that date—the first break beef eaters have had since rationing went into effect. At the same time pork chops and bacon will drop another two points, as an added inducement to their increased consumption.

Butter now steps up into the 12-point-per-pound class with porterhouse steak and round tip roast. Production of this food decreases normally during winter months and there are additional decreases this year due to a big shift toward direct consumption of fluid milk and dairy people say—to the blow administered by the 10 per cent rollback subsidy which collided with a Government support price to upset "butter production plans."

Lard, shortening and cheese values will remain unchanged during September and canned fish products containing more than 20 per cent of rationed canned fish are placed on the point chart for the first time.

Twenty-one changes are made in the point values of processed foods, 13 up and 8 down. Canned beans, green, wax and fresh-shelled, will be down 1 point for a No. 2 can.

Civilians to Get More Tea Supplies

The War Food Administration announced yesterday the immediate increase in quotas for tea packers and wholesale receivers to permit additional supplies for civilian tables.

The order, retroactive to July 1, increases quotas for the last two quarters of 1943 from 50 to 60 per cent of deliveries for the same periods of 1941.

Fresh soy beans, put in a classification to themselves, will carry a point value of 5 points for a No. 2 can, or a reduction of 6 points.

No. 2 cans of beets and carrots will be down 2 points. The No. 2½ can of tomatoes will go down 3

Tax Squabble May Sidetrack Any New Bill

By Francis M. Le May
Associated Press Staff Writer

A heated controversy between Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and the congressional tax staff broke open yesterday, causing doubts in competent Capitol Hill quarters that a new general revenue act, with higher wartime levies, can be written in 1943.

The schism developed after the congressional tax staff sought to obtain information from the Bureau of Internal Revenue and other agencies, without channelling such requests through the Treasury.

It is understood that Morgenthau resents the tax staff engaging in such tactics to obtain information about the Treasury's efforts to draw up an Administration revenue program. The Cabinet member is said to be ready to go into the courts to maintain his position, possibly with the contention that such procedure is an unconstitutional interference with executive authority.

The tax staff can use a subpena to obtain the desired information—if such action is approved by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

District Record For 90-Degree Days Is Broken

This summer has broken Washington's 1872 record for 90 degree days in one year, the weatherman said last night.

When the mercury climbed to 90 at 3:50 yesterday it was the fifty-fourth time this year that temperatures of 90 or above have been recorded. And 53 90-degree days were recorded in 1872.

Slightly cooler is today's forecast for Washington and vicinity. Scattered thunder showers and slightly cooler temperatures are expected in Virginia.

During last night's storm, the mercury dropped from 83 to 75 in 15 minutes during which approximately .08-inch of rain fell, the bureau said.

The highest temperature yesterday was 91 at 4:18 p. m.; the lowest, 70, at 6:26 a. m. The highest humidity was 76 per cent at 2:30 a. m.

Police, Fire Budgets Ask 7½ Millions

By Elwin Stouffer
Post Staff Writer

The combined budgets for the Police and Fire Departments for the fiscal year 1945, submitted to the District Commissioners yesterday, were in excess of 7½ million dollars which represented an increase of more than $900,000 over the current year's expenditures.

By far the largest items, represented in the increases, are for overtime pay for civilian employes and salary increases for police and fire personnel. Both wage adjustments were authorized by Congress earlier this year to meet the wartime cost of living. They were made retroactive to December 1, 1942.

The Police Department budget amounted to $4,769,185, an increase of $532,240 over the current year. The Fire Department requested $2,814,927, an increase of $378,167 over present expenditures.

The Police Department's estimated increase for personnel services totaled $532,415. This sum is less $101,500, deducted for an expected saving which will be incurred in salary lapses.

Civilian employes will draw approximately $38,648 in overtime pay with automatic increases for members of the department amounting to $32,647. A new stenographer for the Police and Fire Clinic is included at a cost of $1620.

It is requested that $1200 be provided for two chaplains who serve members of the force when they are sick or wounded and occasionally conduct funerals. Heretofore these services have been supplied without compensation.

An item on the budget, which failed to pass in the 1944 budget, is the request that the rank of corporal be established and that 65 privates be promoted to this rank. There was $13,000 requested for pay increases, which would amount to $200 a year per man.

It is pointed out that many times it is necessary for a private to take the place of a sergeant and shoulder those responsibilities without an increase in rank or pay. The intermediate rank would take care of this situation, it was stated.

During the past two years the authorized personnel of the de-

Penny Milk Program Sent To Agriculture for Approval

The "penny milk" program, to help supply an adequate diet for some 18,000 school children here in the coming term, was submitted yesterday for final approval to Department of Agriculture officials.

Earlier in the day, Niles S. Baldrige, War Food Administration supervisor for Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia, met with Harry M. Gardner, supervisor of the program in the District, to discuss methods of putting the program through despite "certain administrative difficulties" arising out of the war situation.

Chief obstacle to immediate approval of the "penny milk" program this year has been the new contract proposed by the Department of Agriculture for provision of milk supplies by Washington dairies to the various District schools operating under the community school lunch program.

An arrangement which has been in effect since 1934 provided that Gardner, acting for the District government, contracts directly with the dairies for milk supplies. The District paid the dairies 1½ cents per half pint, while Agriculture was billed for the remaining sum to make up the contract price.

The proposal recently presented to Gardner, to go into effect when school opens September 20, stipulates that the District contract with the dairies for the full cost of the milk, with Agriculture billed by Gardner at stated intervals for its share of the cost.

Under this arrangement the District government would have to advance the total cost of the milk program for the coming school term, with reimbursement at some later date. This, Gardner declared, would not be possible, since the

Japs Leave Island Base In Pacific

U. S. Planes Meet No Resistance at Santa Isabel; Mandang Raided

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, Sept. 3 (Friday).—Lack of resistance to American air forces raiding Santa Isabel Island in the Solomons indicated Japanese evacuation of another base today while in New Guinea Allied troops moved in closer to the Salamaua airdrome.

Liberator pilots returning from an attack on Rekata Bay, once a strong enemy seaplane base at Santa Isabel, reported that for the first time no antiaircraft fire was encountered.

(In the Madang area, New Guinea sector above ground-menaced Salamaua, a record of more than 206 tons of bombs dropped were dropped by fighter-escorted bombers, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced Friday.

(The raiders added to the havoc by sweeping down to tree-top heights to pour 90,000 rounds of machinegun and cannon fire on enemy installations at Madang, Amron Mission and Alexishafen. Not a Japanese plane was encountered in the air in the Madang area.)

Santa Isabel, which lies northwest of New Georgia Island, was cut off from direct communication with main Japanese supply bases to the west by the American capture of New Georgia and Vella Lavella Islands.

Last week the enemy abandoned its base at Bairoko Harbor on New Georgia, following the precedent set at Kiska, Alaska. Japanese resistance continued, however, at Vila on Kolombangara Island, across the narrow Kula Gulf from Bairoko.

American artillery, moved up to the gulf after the occupation of the harbor, opened fire on Vila in another move to soften defenses there for the final thrust to eliminate all Japanese garrisons in the central Solomons. Vila, outflanked by Americans on Vella Lavella, has been the target of many bombings and naval bombardments.

Marcus Fight 'Only Token' Japs Warned

McCain Tells Tokyo Of Smashing Blows In Preparation By American Fleet

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Japanese war lords received a blunt warning last night that the attack on Marcus Island was "only a token" of a rain of smashing blows about to be loosed on their empire by the greatly strengthened American Pacific Fleet.

Vice Admiral John S. McCain, deputy chief of naval operations for air, declared in a radio address that naval attacks "on Japan herself" are in preparation, which "will spearhead our ground forces' advance on Tokyo and the heart of the Nipponese empire."

McCain's forecast of developing offensives against the Japs contained the first official comment on the September 1 raid on Marcus, only 990 nautical miles from Yokohama. Details of the attack, which the Japs say was carried out by 150 planes from two aircraft carriers, have not been released by the Navy.

Poised to Strike

"Tonight our Navy—now the greatest Navy in our history—is poised to strike on the surface, under the surface and in the air," the Navy air chief stated.

"Our surface and air power is being coordinated in such strength that we eventually will sink the major part of Japan's fleet. We are going to knock every fighting and bombing plane she has out of the air."

Admiral McCain said aircraft carriers will be a big factor in the conquest of Japan, declaring that our carrier strength is now double what it was at the beginning of the war.

Describing the Marcus raid as a token of what is to come, he stated that such blows will increase in intensity until finally "in continuous attack we lay waste in blood and ashes the home islands of this treacherous, brutal and savage people."

Only further direct word of the Marcus attack yesterday came from

Suicide Dives By U.S. Pilots Hit Ploesti

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Sept. 2.—Tech. Sergt. Frank B. Kozak of Carbondale, Pa., arrived in the United States today with a gripping story of how the crews of two big, four-engined Liberator bombers sacrificed their planes and lives by deliberately diving into Ploesti oil field targets, causing tremendous explosions and fires.

Kozak, a crewman on a Liberator piloted by Lieut. Col. Julian Bleyer, said the two heavy bombers were hit and smoking before they dived downward as a sacrifice "to shorten the war." He saw one other big plane crash to earth a moment after releasing a cascade of bombs on a refinery.

"From my window I saw a Liberator rush in near us, smoking heavily, almost out of control," he reported at the Army air base here. "I could see the pilot working the controls. He headed the bomber at a big refinery and dove into it. The plane, its crew of 10, and the refinery exploded together.

"It was catastrophic. A minute later I saw another big bomber do the same thing. It was farther off flying for an important cracking plant. Smoke was trailing from

Crack British Eighth Army Makes Initial Landing After Days of Terrific Blows By Warships and Bombers

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa (Friday), Sept. 3.—Allied troops stormed across the narrow strait of Messina today to land in Italy and launch the long-heralded invasion of the European Continent.

A brief announcement from Allied headquarters disclosed that Allied troops had set foot on the continent and revealed that the invasion force was spearheaded by the crack British Eighth Army, veterans of smashing victories over the Axis in North Africa.

The landings were preceded by days of violent aerial bombardment which knocked out Axis railway communications between Southern and Northern Italy and reduced Axis positions on the toe of the Italian boot to a shambles.

British and American warships also had participated in the mighty preinvasion bombardment of the Italian mainland.

It was the first time Allied troops had set foot on European soil since the Dieppe raid in August 1942, when Allied forces landed on the Coast of France, but withdrew.

Canadian troops were included in the attacking forces, Allied headquarters disclosed.

Invasion of the continent came quickly on the heels of the cleanup of the Sicilian campaign, begun at dawn July 10 and brought to a victorious conclusion 38 days later with all Axis troops either killed, routed or prisoners.

Canadians Land

A special communique, announcing the mainland landings, said the forces of Gen. Eisenhower continued their advance. British and Canadian troops of the Eighth Army, supported by Allied sea and air power attacked across the Straits of Messina early today and landed on the mainland of Italy."

Thus as in the Sicilian landings, powerful air and sea fleets gave protection to the landing troops.

By moving across the Strait of Messina from the eastern shore of Sicily, the Allied forces had only a few miles of water to cross. The strait at its narrowest point at the extreme northeastern corner of Sicily is only a little over 2 miles wide and can be crossed by fast boat in about 20 minutes.

The announcement of the landing was issued here shortly after 7 a. m. (1 a. m., Eastern War Time.)

The complete text:

"Allied forces under the command of General Eisenhower have continued their advance. British and Canadian troops of the Eighth Army, supported by Allied sea and air power, atacked across the Strait of Messina today and landed on the mainland of Italy."

It was recalled that Canadian troops had been withdrawn from the Sicilian fighting some days before it ended. At that time, it was generally understood the Canadians were preparing to help spearhead some new attack.

Both American and British fliers took part in the air cover that accompanied the landing.

Significantly, the invasion came on the fourth anniversary of the day Great Britain declared herself at war with Germany.

It was possible this factor was taken into consideration at the recent Allied war confernece at Quebec. Final plans undoubtedly were made during that historic meeting, for which Prime Minister Churchill crossed the Atlantic and President Roosevelt journeyed to the historic city of the United States' northern neghbor.

Followed Air Blows

This audacious blow followed the pummeling of every target sighted the day before on the virtually paralyzed toe of Italy nearest Sicily, Allied headquarters announced.

As the artillery of the air softened the target a short ferry ride across the Strait of Messina, Allied armies stood ready at the southern gateways to continental Europe.

Wednesday RAF Bostons raided what official reports described as "army targets including a bivouac area" in the region of Reggio di Calabria, where the enemy would be expected to concentrate whatever anti-invasion troops were available.

Nazis Retreat To Dnieper; Rail Line Cut

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Friday), Sept. 3.—Russia announced early today that five Red armies plunging westward had cut the Bryansk-Kiev railway 150 miles from Kiev, smashed German reinforcements in a six-mile gain on Smolensk, and rolled up Axis lines in a new 45-mile-wide spurt in the Donets Basin.

Marshal Stalin's Thursday order of the day said that the Ukraine citadel of Sumy, 90 miles northwest of Kharkov, had fallen to Gen. Nikolai Vatutin's army, and a communique announced the capture of Krolevets and Yampol, two points on the vital Bryansk-Kiev railway linking the enemy's central and southern fronts.

Other Cities Recaptured

Lisichansk, Voroshilovsk, Slavyanoserbsk, and other cities were seized in the Donets basin, while Budenovka, 20 miles from Mariupol, was taken in the push along the rim of the Sea of Azov, said the communique recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

The swiftness of the Russian advances and the tone of the communique indicated that the Germans were engaged in a large-scale retreat toward the Dnieper River, particularly in the huge Donets basin. The bulletin, however, emphasized that the Germans were fighting stubbornly all along the 600-mile front.

More than 9000 Germans were killed yesterday as the Red armies overran nearly 250 cities and villages, many of them strategic prizes, for a two-day bag of nearly 550 localities.

Germany's 1941 invasion lines now have been cracked by the Russians in a 1943 offensive that has carried the Red army more than half-way from historic Stalingrad to the Polish border.

The capture of Krolevets, 25 miles north of the rail junction of Konotop, put the Red army 150 miles from Kiev after a 130-mile summer lunge from Kursk. Moreover, its fall further flanked Bryansk from the south and may

Forts Raid France; Dutch Canal Blasted

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), Sept. 3.—United States Flying Fortresses bombed airfields at Mardyck and Denain late yesterday, and other battle planes ushered in the fifth year of the war with further attacks on French targets under the largest Allied fighter cover used in air operations so far in 1943, it was announced today.

"Good bombing results were observed on all targets," said a communique issued jointly by United States Army headquarters and the British Air Ministry.

The RAF targets were widespread, but one of the main ones was the lock gates at the south end of the Hansweert Canal, one of Holland's busy waterway links for seagoing shipping. The locks were destroyed. They had enabled ships to approach Antwerp without going into the sea, where the vessels would be subject to air and sea

Many Liquor Shops Are Closing Until After Monday

Liquor stores in the District are faced with a serious shortage and in many instances are closing their doors until after Labor Day, Harry C. Weschler, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers Association, said yesterday.

Wechsler, who said he planned to close his own store Saturday and not reopen until the following Friday, disclosed that "most other stores have either decided to do the same thing, or else they are seriously considering it."

The existence of these reports was brought to the attention of Mrs. Agnes Mason, member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. She said that reports of purchases here by Virginia bootleggers had reached the board, but that she did not know of any recent heavy sales to such persons.

However, she said, the board would certainly institute an investigation should definite information be submitted.

Churchill Talks Cancel Today's Presidential Press Conference

By Frederic Tuttle
International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night canceled his regular Friday morning news conference in order that he might devote more time to his White House discussions with British Prime Minister Churchill.

The cancellation was announced by Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early shortly after Mr. Roosevelt concluded a meeting with his cabinet.

Mr. Roosevelt, Early said, regretted his inability to hold the news conference because he had arranged meetings with the Prime Minister and other officials which made it impossible for him to see reporters.

The President and Churchill resumed their discussions yesterday morning, with the Chief Executive slashing his regular appointment list to the bone in order to see as much of his distinguished visitor as possible.

During the forenoon, Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff, was summoned to the White House to confer with the Prime Minister in a continuation of the military strategy talks begun at Quebec.

Churchill also conferred with high-ranking British military and diplomatic officials.

Denmark's revolt against German rule and the rebellion and unrest throughout Hitler's captive European continent were believed to have been reviewed at length by the President and the Prime Minister.

Soviet Paper Sharply Flays Rule by AMG

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 2.—AMG—the Allied military government for occupied territories, formerly called AMGOT—was sharply criticized today in the Soviet magazine, War and the Working Class.

The magazine said "the administration itself is of a military government based on principles which have nothing in common with the principles of democracy."

Divorcing the Soviet government from any affiliation with AMG in Sicily, the magazine said: "The Soviet government does not participate in this organization."

Following its usual style of quoting foreign press reports, the magazine emphasized the dissolution of the Fascist Party in Sicily and the dismissal of Fascist leaders from civilian posts, but said the "disrespectful name of 'Gauleiter Schools'" had been given to places where officers are prepared for posts under AMG.

War and the working class remarked it was no wonder "sharp criticism in press and political circles in England and America" had resulted, after quoting various dispatches as stating there is absence of freedom of speech in Sicily and that high standing former Fascists are on the Allied pay list.

The article concluded with the comment that "AMGOT is not undertaking the necessary measures for the actual destruction of facism. AMGOT has retained the old Fascist government apparatus and is not attracting democratic elements to its administration."

Induction of Men From 37 to 45 Is Advocated

By the Associated Press

Asserting most future selectees will not be used for combat duty, Representative Snyder (Democrat) of Pennsylvania urged yesterday that Selective Service resume the induction of men between 37 and 45 years of age.

Induction of men over 37 was halted some time ago because the armed forces did not believe the average man in the 37-44 bracket was physically fit for combat service.

Snyder, head of the Appropriations Subcommittee handling all War Department funds, said he believed it would be far better to induct men between 37 and 45 without dependents than to put fathers under 38 in the service.

"The size of our Army now is such that the main need for additional men is for replacements," Snyder said. "We have plenty of well-trained soldiers on American soil now and they can be used for replacements in combat service as soon as their places here are filled. There is no reason why men up to 45, without dependents, cannot provide these replacements for the domestic service."

that one, too. Just before reaching the target the pilot dove down into the cracking plant and blew it up."

Explaining why the Americans plunged to death with their bombs, Kozak said:

"High officers had told us our misson would be vital, essential to the Allied armies, and if successful we'd shorten the war. We'd all practiced for weeks, each bombardier had his target pinpointed. From what I know, not one bomb missed its target."

Sergeant Kozak earned the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in the recent 2400-mile, 14-hour round trip that blasted the Rumanian oil field and refineries, he said the formation of bombers made the trip at 50 feet and dropped 600,000 pounds of bombs.

"The other waist gunner, Tech Sergt. Frank Beauregard of Salem, Mass., and I lifted four big boxes of incendiaries from the floor and spilled them out of the window," related Kozak.

"Our pilot had to pull up to 450 feet to clear smokestacks. The plane was filled with smoke from fires already rolling through the target area when we got there. I saw other incendiaries hit oil tanks, and some of the bombs I flung from the window must have done damage, too. A roar and roll of flames and black smoke mounted from oil tanks."

He said the planes were so low that heavy antiaircraft fire was ineffective but light flak was "the fiercest I've ever seen."

"Colonel Bleyer dropped to 50 feet again and opened up to get away from there," he said. "We were in formation with other bombers. Our top gunner, Tech. Sergt. Bob McCown of Los Angeles, shot down two pursuit planes after we dropped our bombs. The rest of us couldn't get in a shot because those high-altitude fighters never came down to our level."

Sicily Cost Army 7500 Casualties

Army losses in the 38-day conquest of Sicily numbered 7500 killed, wounded and missing to bring the Army's over-all war losses to 70,872 and lift the announced casualties for the armed services and Merchant Marine to 105,446 since Pearl Harbor.

The latest Army figures were given at a press conference yesterday by John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War. He said that of the 70,872 casualties in all combat zones, 9,209 were killed in action or died of wounds, 20,159 were wounded, 21,764 were missing, and 19,740 have been officially reported prisoners of war.

Of the Army wounded, McCloy said, more than 9000 have recovered completely and returned to active duty. He added that the total of missing included a large number of Philippine Scouts lost in Bataan and Corregidor.

Navy Casualties

Navy casualties announced to date are 21,556; Marines, 7904, and the Coast Guard, 363. The latest Merchant Marine summary showed 4731 dead and missing.

In all the services, the dead now total 19,863.

Casualty summaries of services other than the army:

Navy—7862 dead; 2561 wounded; 8914 missing; 2246 prisoners of war.

Other Services

Marines—2005 dead; 2506 wounded; 663 missing; 1925 prisoners of war.

Coast Guard—182 dead; 22 wounded; 158 missing; 1 prisoner of war.

"While detailed information is not yet available," wrote Hull, "the Germans clearly have decided to extinguish the last remnants of freedom left in your country in a final attempt to crush the spirit of resistance to a brutal conqueror so gallantly displayed by your King and countrymen."

Hull added that he intended to continue recognizing Kauffmann as Denmark's representative in the United States.

He concluded his letter by expressing the hope that "in the not too distant future your relations with this country may be conducted against the background of a freed, happy, Danish people."

The secretary also emphasized that relations between the United States and Russia are wholeheartedly cordial and friendly.

Squadrons of P-47 Thunderbolts escorted and covered the Flying Fortresses.

"Marauders (B-26S) and RAF Bostons, Mitchells and Venturas bombed targets in Pas de Calais," the communique said. "Other Marauders attacked the power station at Mazingarbe and Bostons attacked the freight yards at Sergueux."

Four enemy aircraft were reported destroyed, one by Fortress guns and three by Spitfires. One of the medium bombers, a light bomber and two fighters failed to return.

Three Hurricanes and one Typhoon were reported missing from the day light attack on the Dutch canals.

Berlin Still Burning

Stockholm, Sept. 2 (AP).—Roundabout reports from tightly censored Berlin said tonight that 450 fires were still burning in the German capital after Tuesday night's RAF raid that killed an estimated 5000 persons and paralyzed the city's transportation system.

Swiss dispatches in Swedish newspapers said that some of the fires were so large firemen merely tried to isolate them instead of saving the blazing buildings.

Bombed-out Berliners were said to be streaming out of the city. Police attempts at railway stations to check the crush were reported to have caused many brushes with civilians.

Berlin was just beginning to clean up from the last raid when the new 45-minute attack added new devastation.

Arms From Britain

Portugal Taking Steps For Defense

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 2.—Portugal was disclosed today to have received new arms from Britain and to be planning a series of defensive military measures which Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar said, in a communique issued in Lisbon, were necessary because of the war situation.

The communique disclosed that the new war material would be used in large-scale military maneuvers to be held late in September and October.

These moves, it was stated, do not indicate "that a change in the country's policy regarding the war should be expected, although development of the international situation and the dangers it involves are sufficient to impose on the people the greatest attention, and the government's greatest prudence and care in developing their defensive machine."

The extent and type of armament received were not disclosed, but the arrangement was not considered unusual here in view of the friendly relations between England and Portugal.

The London Evening Standard interpreted the "mobilization" of Portugal as a possible indication that it might be "necessary to reinforce the colonial garrisons according to the evolution of events concerning them."

"In any case," he continued, "there will be a change of guard of those troops long stationed overseas that will in itself justify certain military activities."

Stilwell's Planes Hit Jap Ships

Chungking, Sept. 2 (AP).—American air attacks on Japanese shipping of Hongkong were reported today by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters, together with sweeps over the Yangtze River and an assault on the Canton-Hankow railway. All planes returned safely.

A communique said the enemy air base at Kingmen, near the Yangtze port of Ichang, was blasted. Off Hongkong one freighter was left sinking and another badly damaged, while a submarine chaser was set afire. Two gunboats and a large river boat also were attacked and left sinking in the Yangtze.

Shipyard Launches Tenth Escort Carrier

Vancouver, Wash., Sept. 2 (AP).—Henry J. Kaiser's Vancouver shipyard today launched its tenth aircraft escort carrier for the Navy, the U. S. S. Tripoli, and his Portland, Oreg., Liberty ship yard turned out its third of 22 ships planned this month to set a World War II record.

force Germany's south-central armies to fall back on Kiev. Captured Yampol lies 32 miles northeast of Krolevets.

"Soviet units are inflicting unceasing blows on the mauled divisions of the enemy, not giving them the possibility of disengaging from pursuit and organizing their defenses," said a communique supplement telling of the fighting southwest of Sevsk that spilled across the Bryansk-Kiev line. One Soviet formation alone was said to have wiped out 2000 Germans in that area during the day.

On the Smolensk front the Russians swept on 6 miles after toppling Yelnya and Dorogobuzh. German troops there were being reinforced by fresh reserves hurled into battle straight from the march, but the communique said:

"All attempts of the Hitlerites, however, to stem our attacking units met with failure."

It added that 6000 Germans were killed and 44 tanks knocked out west and south of Yelnya in an advance which apparently puts the Russians only 40 miles from Smolensk.

Scores of tanks were knocked out and large quantities of enemy booty captured during the day, and Soviet airmen were attacking Konotop, Debaltsevo and other rail junctions glutted with German troop trains trying to reinforce the sagging Axis fronts.

German radio broadcasts told of "extremely bitter defensive fighting of undiminished violence" on the entire front. It said that Russian troops again were attacking the narrow Axis toehold in the Caucasus opposite the embattled Donets Basin.

In announcing Sumy's fall Stalin issued his fourth triumphant order of the day since Monday. As usual he ordered salvoes from 120 guns in Moscow fired to celebrate the event, and his order also ended in the usual grim ultimatum: "death to the German invaders."

Krolevets' capture was the deepest southern penetration yet made in the 1941 German lines established below Bryansk a few months after the original Axis invasion.

The fall of the coal and iron center of Lisichansk, Voroshilovsk, Slavanyoserbsk, Chirstyakvo, and other important points imperiled the German-held network of railways feeding the Donets garrisons.

Along the Sea of Azov, Col. Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Russian army, which overran Taganrog and killed or captured more than 41,000 encircled Germans, swept on westward after the broken remnants of eight German division reeling back toward Mariupol.

On the basis of the Russian announcement General Tolbukhin's troops were believed to be only 25 miles from Mariupl. Their ultimate goal is Melitopol, the rail and land gateway to the Crimea 100 miles farther. Their immediate objective, however, is to flank the huge overextended German army jutting into the rich Donets Basin to the north.

Russian troops hit the Germans from the east as well as across the middle Donets. Christyakovo, 36 miles east of Stalino, and Krasnykut, 20 miles southeast of Debaltsevo, were recaptured, the communique said.

Nazis Prepare Public

The Berlin radio anticipated the new Russian onslaught across the middle Donets Wednesday night, telling of tremendous Russian reserves swinging up to the front there. Today's Soviet bulletin bore out that German broadcast.

The German high command communique recorded by the Associated Press indicated that the Axis air force had flung all the weight it could muster in an effort to halt the Red army plunge toward Smolensk—a prize whose capture would reopen White Russia to the advancing Russians.

Finns Deate Today

Stockholm, Sept. 2 (AP).—A showdown on Finland's foreign policy may come tomorrow when the doors are opened to criticism of the present course at a parliamentary session devoted to the first general discussion of foreign relations since November, 1941. The debate will be secret.

The country's eight political parties conducted separate private meetings today reviewing the action of 33 prominent political leaders who on August 20 warned President Risto Ryti that Finland's position was growing more dangerous. They urged the government to investigate every avenue for a separate peace and particularly beseeched improvement of "deteriorating relations with the United States."

Claim Boris Suicide

London, Sept. 2 (INS).—King Boris of Bulgaria committed suicide after receiving an ultimatum from Hitler demanding the naton's "full military cooperation," the Daily Telegraph said today.

The paper, in a disptach from Aankara, quoted as its source, "the most authoritative view in Balkan diplomatic circles."

Philoff Turns Down Plea To Quit Axis

But They Need King's Backing For Ruling Board

By John H. Colburn
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Sept. 2.—Faced with a tough, rebellious Danish population, the Nazis sought today to form an 18-man administrative council similar to that set up in Norway in 1940 to enable them to step out of their role as military dictators of Denmark.

King Christian, however, assured of the absolute loyalty of his people, appeared to hold the key to the situation.

Under the administrative council, the country would be governed by a group composed of the present three directors general of the government, who are German, and 15 departmental chiefs who are now cooperating with the Germans pending further orders from King Christian, who is under guard at Sorgenfri Castle.

All indications today pointed toward a pressing German desire to get out of the situation they got into when the Danes, battling them tooth and nail, forced the urgent dispatch of divisions of Nazi troops to bolster the occupying garrisons.

A spokesman for the government in Berlin told foreign correspondents the Germans had no intention of changing Danish home policy and wanted to keep all departments in Danish hands.

Reports from the free Danish bureau in Stockholm said the Germans were prepared to ask the King to approve the Administrative Council after Premier Eric Scavenius, who resigned, refused to form a new government.

This had its ironical side, for the Germans informed Christian on Sunday that his political functions were ended. Now, however, they are forced by the unity and loyalty of the Danish monarch's subjects to return to him for approval of any form of administration they hope to get the Danish people to accept.

Christian is not expected to take any formal stand until German Gen. Hermann von Hannecken submits a definite governing proposal. And until the King makes his statement, Danes outside the country are not expected to make any further moves toward forming a free Danish government affiliated with the United Nations.

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Sept. 1 (Delayed).—Bulgaran opposition leaders headed by Nicholas Mouschanov have informed Premier Bogdan Philoff that so long as he clings to his pro-German policy the opposition will continue, late reports from Bulgaria said today.

However, the Germans have brought a "military councilor" into the country to help Philoff keep order.

The opposition leaders, when Philoff met them Monday, are reported to have demanded that the "Kiosseivanov Memorandum" be taken as a guide to future policy.

This memorandum is said to have been written by George Kiosseivanov, the predecessor of Philoff in the premier's office and now Minister to Switzerland, and submitted to the late King Boris when visiting Sofia early this month. According to reports at that time, Kiosseivanov counseled edging out of the Axis camp.

Philoff rejected the opposition's proposal, it is said, and in his next interview with German Ambassador Beckerle gave formal assurances that Bulgarian policy will remain unchanged.

At this interview Beckerle, after reading Philoff a lecture on the necessity of stricter internal vigilance, blandly announced that a German "military councilor" had arrived in Sofia and that the Bulgars were expected to take his suggestions for maintaining order and controlling "anti-German and Communistic elements."

Reports that Philoff has gone to Berlin and that Marshal Erwin Rommel has arrived in Sofia could not be confirmed today, but it was pointed out here that if the Premier has gone to Germany even before the burial of the King, it probably is because the Germans fear popular disturbances immediately after the funeral services and wish to dictate steps to prevent an upheaval.

The possible effects in Bulgaria of the Russian victory at Taganrog probably are contributing to German nervousness.

Messmore Honored

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American Legion of Merit was awarded today to Col. Waldinew Messmore, Holdrege, Nebr., for liaison work with the British Air Ministry. The citation by Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers said Messmore planned the organization for pooling American equipment for combined use of the British and United States Air Forces.

Safeguard Poland, Cleric Asks

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 2.—The Most Rev. Edward Mooney, archbishop of Detroit, said today in a statement in the current issue of the Michigan Catholic that "if we compromise with any kind of totalitarian aggression against Poland, the end of this war will mark only another armistice, not a good and enduring peace."

The archbishop urged prayers for America as well as for Poland during Polish week, September 5 to 11, saying:

"As we stand in embattled might on the sure ground of moral principles it is disconcerting to see men who love America propose that we blandly pay a Communist dictator's price for collaboration in the post-war period. These proposals are usually coupled with strictures on the British and French governments of 1939 for their refusal to meet Stalin's terms for a Russian alliance that might have saved them from the blitzkrieg.

"What were Stalin's terms? The craven sacrifice of Poland and the Baltic states and of the moral principle their desertion entailed? All honor to them, then. In that instance, at least, Britain and France acted like great nations with a soul. That is what we would like to see America do in the making of the peace—and Poland may again be the test. When we pray for Poland, let us also pray for America."

The Bryants have two other sons in the service. Sergt. James Preston Bryant now overseas and Sergt. Robert M. Bryant stationed at Camp Lee, Va.

First Lieut. Arthur B. Disney of Hanover, Md., and Pvt. Benjamin J. Borzymowski of Baltimore, Md., have also been listed as missing in action.

Brazil's War Minister Previews Army Show

Maj. Jose Cintra and Capt. Vernon Walters, United States military aide to General Dutra.

On the "Back the Attack" grounds, General Dutra and party were escorted by Lieut.-Col. Frank T. McCabe, officer in charge and his assistants. The ordnance tour was conducted by Maj. C. Stewart Comeaux.

Previous to his visit to the "Back the Attack" grounds which he predicted would be an unparelleled success, General Dutra visited the Pentagon Building where he was decorated with the Legion of Merit by Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff.

At noon with Ambassador Martins, the Minister of War conferred with President Roosevelt.

Work in preparation for the opening of "Back the Attack" was rapidly nearing completion in preparation for the grand opening September 9. It will last 18 days through September 26.

Admission Is Free To 'Back the Attack'

The public will be admitted free to the Army's great show, "Back the Attack." Here residents of the Nation's Capital may see what they are paying for—the weapons and equipment with which to beat the Axis.

"Back the Attack" is to be the most complete, most modern show of its kind ever attempted by the Army. It is to demonstrate to each American who sees it what his bonds represent.

The show, sponsored by The Washington Post and conducted entirely by the Army, will be by far the most ambitious program of its kind ever attempted. It is in connection with the Treasury Department's Third War Loan Drive.

Meanwhile General Orders, No. 1, dated August 30, for Headquarters, U. S. Army Exhibit, "Back the Attack," made its appearance on the file of the executive officer on the show grounds. It contained 15 orders as follows:

"1. In accordance with Par. 1, Letter, Director, War Department Bureau of Public Relations, 28 August, 1943, the undersigned assumes the duties of:

Officer in Charge of Army Exhibits,

Manager of Grounds,

Officer to put into effect on the grounds the policies approved by the War Department bureau of public relations, liaison officer with the commanding officer, Task Force, U. S. Army.

"2. Maj. Baird F. West, M. I., is the staff officer representing the director, bureau of public relations, and liaison officer with the Treasury Department, Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces and Army Service Forces.

"3. Maj. John H. Galloway, AUS, is assigned as War Department liaison officer with all news media representatives. All news items will be cleared through Major Galloway.

"4. Capt. Raymond M. Peak, Infantry, is detailed as adjutant of the exhibit.

"5. Capt. Melvin L. Payne, AUS, is detailed as police officer.

"6. Lieut. Col. James W. Rankin, Infantry, is the commanding officer of the Task Force, USA, participating in the exhibit and the military demonstrations.

"7. The exhibits will be open to the public from 1200 (noon) to 2200 (10 p. m.) daily, including Sundays, from September 9 to September 26, 1943, both days included.

"8. There will be three military demonstrations daily at 1430 (10:30 a. m.), 1645 (4:45 p. m.) and 2000 (8 p. m.). These will take place in the arena.

"9. All services having exhibits will be responsible for their area police. Especial attention will be given fire hazards.

"10. The guard will be under the commanding officer, Task Force, and will receive orders only from the officer in charge and the commanding officer of the Task Force, U. S. Army.

"11. Smoking is strickly prohibited on the grounds from 2300 (11 p. m.) to 0800 (8 a. m.) daily.

"12. All complaints and all information with reference to lost and found property will be made to this headquarters.

"13. Each exhibit is required to have its own property accountability and responsibility.

"14. Time for special events in all exhibits will clear through this headquarters.

"15. All military personnel are enjoined to observe the rules of military courtesy.

FRANK T. McCABE,
Lieut. Col. Infantry,
Officer in Charge."

In answer to inquiries which have come to The Washington Post, the War Department Public Relations Bureau under Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, explained cameras might be used on the exhibit grounds only after the show has officially opened. Prior to that, according to Maj. John H. Galloway, at the show public relations office, no pictures may be made by private individuals of the guns, munitions, equipment and material on the grounds.

Meantime four 90-mm. antiaircraft guns, one to be stationed at each corner of the Washington Monument, rolled to the exhibit late yesterday.

These fast-moving, long distance weapons, teamed with a remarkable remote control system, are deadly in action against Axis planes.

According to recent reports from Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands, one 90-mm battery destroyed a total of 16 enemy aircraft in a month's time. The ammunition expenditure is remarkably low—50 to 60 rounds for each Jap plane brought down. It is a record for antiaircraft combat—proof of the accuracy of the remote control system.

(As a comparison, during World War I, the French estimated only one out of ten thousand antiaircraft shells was effective.)

The particular battery at Guadalcanal had no trouble in engaging with accurate fire planes flying at high altitudes and destroying them. The 90-mm fires several miles almost straight up, controlled by a director which requires only the operators to keep the plane in its cross-hairs, while it automatically grinds out the complicated fire data and transmits it electrically to the gun.

This weapon is a dual purpose gun. It may be lowered to horizontal thence be used with tremendous effect against mechanical material—tanks or tank destroyers.

The 90-mm. is much more effective than the German 88, much less complicated both to manufacture and to operate.

Already on the "Back the Attack" grounds is a battery of four 40-mm. antiaircraft guns of Swedish design—the famous Bofors. These guns, although smaller in caliber than the 90-mm. are equally accurate. Fast firing, rugged, the Bofors are capable of being aimed in any direction from straight up to 5 degrees below horizontal.

This 40-mm. automatic gun is the Army's deadly defense weapon against low-flying aircraft. It is equally effective against armored vehicles.

Turkish Neutrality Aids Nazi Balkan Flank, Soviet Reports

Moscow, Sept. 2 (AP).—The latest issue of the Soviet magazine, War and the Working Class, in an article titled, "Who gains from the neutrality of Turkey?" Said "The neutrality of Turkey becomes increasingly more favorable and necessary to Germany.

The magazine said "Turkey secures the safety of the Balkan flank of the German armies and allows the Germans to continue to hold very limited forces here and concentrate the overwhelming part of the German troops on the Soviet-German front."

The article asserted that now when Germany is treasuring all her army divisions, her final defeat could be accelerated if Turkey would abandon her neutrality and throw in her lot with the Allies.

Pope's Plea Heralded

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Italian press prominently displayed the entire speech of Pope Piux XII yesterday appealing for "a worthy peace."

The Swiss Telegraphic Agency said today the broadcast appeared under such headings as "Give Nations Hope of Dignified Peace" and "Do Not Offend Rights to Life and Honor.'

Soldier, Now Wounded, Wears Medal For Gallantry in Tunisia Struggle

(This is the sixteenth of a series of interviews with wounded veterans of this war now convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital.

By Hanson H. Hathaway
Post Staff Writer

A medium American tank, with Sergt. Charles B. Vonder Embse, 25, of Kalida, Ohio, commanding, detached itself from the retreating tank force being beaten back by the heavy guns of the German Mark IV's.

The battle of Pont du Fahs in Tunisia was not yet over, nor would it be until gallantly fighting Americans reformed and again took up the gage of action they were reluctantly declining under the superior fire-power of the enemy.

But Sergt. Vonder Embse, holder of the Silver Star for gallantry that shone above that of his comrades in the eyes of military authorities, had no thought of heroics for medals as he slapped the shoulders of the tank's steerer and brought the lumbering death machine around.

Vonder Embse

It now faced the narrow gorge of Pont du Fahs. Machine guns, mortars and light artillery were making an inferno of flame, sound and death up ahead.

Tank Out of Range

For what he was about to do, his tank, with the name "Kalida" painted on its explosion-graved sides, was protection up to a point. And that was up there ahead at a spot where it could be safely left out of reach of the searching guns, while he went forward to save a boy who had failed to come out of the gorge battle with the rest.

The tank poised for a moment, Sergt. Vonder Embse bore his glasses down on the gorge and relocated the hell-blasted sanctuary of rock behind which his wounded buddy had taken refuge.

The glasses rushed the stricken face of the wounded man almost into his face.

So . . .

"Some kids in another tank had come up and told me that this other kid was missing," Sergt. Vonder Embse started his story. "We couldn't go back just then because the Mark IV's were knocking us off like rabbits. Our mediums couldn't stand up to them. I took the tank off side where I could get a look at the narrow slot between the hills where the Germans started beating us back.

More Maneuvering.

"Pretty soon I could make him out, and I decided to go back in after him, Germans or no Germans, tanks or no tanks.

"The rest of the kids in the tank were agreeable, so we brought old 'Kalida' up to this point around the edge of the hills where the artillery couldn't get a swipe at us. And then . . .

Sergt. Vonder Embse crawled out of the turret to perform one of the most audacious rescues in the annals of ths war.

German observers seeing the lone figure scrambling over the rocks on the hillside opposite for a time made sport of him with their rifles. Perhaps suddenly they saw in him a threat to their hardily held positions; for there was a quick chattering stream of machine-gun fire so violent the dust raised by their impact around him formed a screen through which he ran crouchingly and desperate.

In and out of these little dust screens he ran. And each time he emerged the machine-gun fire increased.

Trigger Nervous Germans

"And, I could never understand this," he recalled, "they opened fire with small mortars. They must have thought I was on some single-handed maneuver that didn't mean any good for them. Some of these Germans, and especially the Eyties, get awfully jittery at times."

"I guess God was with me all right," he said. "I finally got up to him. He was half out and I gave him a shot of morphine to ease him off. He was quiet about it, though."

"Did he recognize you, Sergeant?"

"Yeah, he did."

There was abashed reticence in Vonder Embse's tone.

"Did he say anything?"

Man of action, Yank in a Tank Vonder Embse could only say: "Why did you bring that up?"

"Come on, Sergeant——"

"Oh, well. He said 'Van, by jiggers, I knew if anybody'd came back for me, you would.'"

Shoot at Wounded Man

It has been said Germans are fair fighters and, under some conditions, this has, perhaps, been true. Maybe these particular troops subscribed to total war, the killing of any and every body connected with their foe's service, regardless of their status.

For——

"I could hardly believe it. They saw me dragging this kid. They had to see me. And yet they poured it into us . . . I was almost ready to give up and take cover until night, but was afraid because maybe this kid might die. You know how it is.

"Then I saw I could get out of range by carrying him around a jutting out part of the hill. I did this and the rest wasn't so hard. I put him down and ran back to my tank and went back and got him. He had one hell of a jolting until we got him where the medics could look after him."

A machine-gun bullet crippled Vonder Embse's arm as he stood exposed in his tank turret directing his unit's part in the attack on McKnassy, Tunisia. The war ended then for this stalwart son of country blacksmiths, whose families were headed by a great grandfather who started the American line of an old German family.

3 Soldiers From D. C. Area Reported Wounded in Action

Second Lieut. Ralph W. Vernon, Corpl Robert R. Stanley, and Pvt. Donn W. Campbell are reported wounded in action in the North African area, the War Department announced yesterday.

VERNON

Lieutenant Vernon, 27, of 4403 Oliver st., Hyattsville, Md., was wounded July 11. According to a letter received recently by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Vernon, of the same address, he has been decorated with the Purple Heart and the Silver Star.

Born in Standardsville, Va., he attended the public schools there and was employed by the Western Electric Co. prior to his induction in May, 1941.

He was stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and Fort Myer, Va., and received his commission at Fort Benning, Ga., last December. A month later he was sent overseas.

His wife, who works in the finance office of the Prince Georges County Welfare Board, was notified by the War Department August 17, that Lieutenant Vernon would be sent home on furlough soon.

A native of Montgomery County, Md., Corporal Stanley, 31, of Rockville, was a dealer in gas appliances before his induction in February, 1941. He was released that same year because of overage, but was called back to duty shortly after Pearl Harbor.

CAMPBELL

Corporal Stanley was sent overseas last October to take part in the initial invasion of North Africa.

His sister, Mrs. Esther Warfield, who lives at 9409 Woodlawn Drive, Silver Spring, Md., said yesterday that she had received a letter from him recently in which he said that he had been released from the hospital July 26 and was then serving with his unit.

A native Washingtonian, Private Campbell, 21, 4610 Harling Lane, Bethesda, Md., is a graduate of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. He worked as a supply clerk for the War Department before his induction, May 9, 1942.

STANLEY

After taking his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga., he was sent overseas last February. His wife, Mrs. Noreen Campbell of the same address, who works for the Public Health Service in Bethesda, has received word that he has been decorated with the Purple Heart. In a recent letter to her, Private Campbell promised to bring home some of the shrapnel, with which he was wounded, as a souvenir.

Pvt. First Class Joseph J. Howell of Baltimore, Md., Pvt. First Class Clifford W. Carroll of Jonesville, Va., and Pvt Maurice R. Harris of South Norfolk, Va., have also been listed as wounded in action.

Japanese Warned Of New Sea Blows

the Tokyo radio. An enemy broadcast quoted an imperial headquarters communique as saying that "90 Grumman fighters" and "about 60 carrier bombers" from two American aircraft carriers made the raid.

The Domei broadcast admitted that damage was done to the Marcus Island base, but claimed that 12 of the American planes were shot down. A later radio report said that "slight damage" resulted to planes on the ground but damage to personnel and military installations was "almost negligible."

In the absence of any further official word as to the Marcus Island attack, speculation here centered on the possibility that the powerful American carrier force which hit the enemy base might deliver additional and even heavier blows momentarily. The task force is still somewhere in the Western Pacific, possibly within range of other enemy bases.

Opinion is that the Marcus assault was the first of a series of raids designed to bleed the enemy rather than to seize possession of outposts.

Such hit-and-run raids, like the jabs and body blows of a boxer, can have telling effect, even though less spectacular than a haymaker. Japan must rebuild and replace the base installations destroyed by the attacks, a task that requires shipping. And Tokyo is hard pressed for ships.

Planes Must Be Sent

Morover, planes must be sent to the blasted bases not only as replacements for those destroyed but to strengthen them. As Japan also is pressed for planes, the active fighting fronts are bound to suffer.

The result may be to force the enemy to withdraw to shorter defense lines or to seriously weaken some points to an extent that they would fall easily to an attack in force.

Fortresses Seen As Necessitating New Defense

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—British Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert said tonight that "it almost looks as though the Fortress type of bomber has defeated the contemporary fighter."

If that is so, "a new solution to the problem of defense will have to be found" in aerial combat, he said in a radio war commentary.

"The great fire power of a close formation of Flying Fortresses was the reason why they could battle their way through a horde of enemy fighters, reach and bomb their target accurately and get away with losses which in the circumstances were moderate," he stated.

Va. Servicemen Vote on Oath Given to Officer

Residents of Virginia who are now in the armed forces and who wish to vote in the coming election by mail may have their commanding officer serve in lieu of a notary public, according to a ruling given yesterday by State Attorney General Abram P. Staples.

The ruling was given at the request of J. Maynard Magruder, chairman of the Arlington County Democratic Executive Committee.

Cargo Ships Built in August Totaled 164

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

America's shipbuilding goal of at least 19 million deadweight tons by the end of 1943 drew appreciably nearer in August when 164 cargo vessels were turned out, 6 more than in the preceding month.

The August delivery is regarded as another heartening step forward since the number of ships increased despite changes in construction calling for larger vessels. Even July's total of 158 vessels, which was nine short of June production, was labeled "good" for the same reason.

Cargo production in American shipyards for the first eight months of the year now amounts to 1210 vessels totaling 12,182,900 deadweight tons, which is quite in excess of our entire merchant marine prior to Pearl Harbor.

Types Built in August

The total of 164 vessels included 110 Liberty ships, 15 C-types, 15 Maritime Commission tankers, 1 private tanker, 4 Maritime Commission coastal tankers, 2 private coastal tankers, 6 special types, 6 sea-going tugs, 2 ore carriers and 4 concrete barges.

While on one hand pressing for constantly increasing ship production, the Maritime Commission is gradually cutting back other programs now found undesirable either because of inefficiency or unwarranted expense.

Two recent steps toward cutbacks is the concrete barge program and the wooden barge and tug program, both of which were adopted reluctantly at the start of the war because of pressure and the emergency shortage of any type of water craft.

Contracts for concrete barges have already been reduced from 65 to 33 vessels with the indication that the commission would like to "get from under" this entire program on the theory that good money and manpower is being wasted.

Likewise, the commission is cutting down on the construction of wooden auxiliary craft and has ordered builders to deliver the rest of the vessels contracted for by the end of this year when no further contracts are expected to be awarded.

Lithuanian Republic Is Convention Aim

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American Lithuanian Association, opening its national convention today, announced as one of its principal objectives the re-establishment of the Lithuanian republic after the war.

Col. Paul Zadeikis, Lithuanian Minister to Washington, and Senator Tunnell (Democrat) of Delaware addressed the convention.

Exchange Ship Gripsholm Sails for Orient, 1300 Japs Aboard

By the Associated Press

The exchange liner Gripsholm put out from New York Harbor for the Orient yesterday, carrying with her the high hopes of relatives back home for a safe return with 1250 American men, women and children who have been in Japanese hands since Pearl Harbor.

The big Swedish liner had aboard 1330 Japanese civilians who are being repatriated. Another 173 Japanese are to be picked up at Rio de Janeiro.

On the basis of the Gripsholm's time on her first exchange trip last year, it may be early December before the Americans being brought back may walk on the free soil of their homeland again.

In the Gripsholm's hold are large quantities of relief supplies and medicines for American prisoners of war and civilians still interned in the Orient, including the Philippines.

Brilliantly Lighted

To make the Gripsholm as free as possible from any mistaken attack on her journey, she was provided with brilliant electric lights, including some billboard-type reflectors projected over the side and shining on the hull. She travels without convoy, under guarantee of safe conduct by all belligerents.

Tremendous letters run the length of the ship on each side spelling the one word "Diplomat."

Exchange About October 15.

There, about October 15, the exchange will take place, and about 1250 United States nationals and some 250 nationals of the other American republics and Canada will be picked up. The Japanese are bringing these Americans in their exchange ship, Teia Maru.

The first exchange took place more than a year ago at Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa.

The State Department emphasized yesterday that the Gripsholm passenger list cannot be complete until the Teia Maru has left her last port of call which is expected to be about October 1. As soon as the list is completed, the State Department will notify relatives and will then publish the list.

of the Solomons, the most notable gain in the tightening drive on Salamaua was credited to Yankee infantrymen working several miles south of the objective along the coastal area.

It was indicated that the Americans had by-passed a tough Japanese position, which now is virtually surrounded, and then pushed on three-quarters of a mile along a ridge which overlooks Salamaua itself.

Meanwhile, Australian troops, working from the southwest, had reached a point 2 miles or less from the north of the Francisco River. This would place the Aussies almost at the edge of the air strip because the river flows past the field to empty into the sea.

Air and surface forces continued their attacks on supply routes of the Salamaua defenders. Ten barges were destroyed along New Britain's south coast.

3 Packers Given Jail Terms on Sale Violations

Detroit, Sept. 2 (AP).—Three Detroit meat packers were given prison sentences and heavy fines today in Federal Court by Judge Frank A. Picard following their convictions on charges of violating Office of Price Administration regulations in the sale of meat.

Edward Garber, head of the Garber Packing Co., was sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $14,000. Judge Picard later ruled that in the event he pays the fine seven years would be dropped from his prison term.

A six-month prison term and a $4000 fine was given David Aaron, head of the Bay State Packing Co., and Charles H. Klegon, secretary-treasurer of the United Beef Co.,

WPB Will Discontinue Used Hosiery Salvage

Collection of used silk and nylon stockings under the wartime salvage program will be discontinued after September 30, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

Paul C. Cabot, director of WPB's salvage division, said the public response to the stocking salvage appeal has been "amazing." More than 46 million pairs of used stockings were collected up to August 31.

"BACK THE ATTACK WITH WAR BONDS"
HERE ARE 4 TIPS ON HOW TO BUY AN EXTRA $100 WAR BOND EACH YEAR

WAR WORKER:
Sure I'm putting more than 10% of my income into war bonds, but my wife figures that one meatless day a week at home will make it easy for us to buy an additional $100 bond.

MAN-ABOUT-TOWN:
Well I'm a bachelor and buying an extra $100 bond is easy. I just stay home one weekend a month. You'd be surprised what I save.

BUSINESS MAN:
Same way at our house. Each member of the family has agreed to forego one pet pleasure so we can buy a bond that will be used to get some household appliance after the war is over.

SALESMAN:
You help the country's transportation problem, too. For my part, I'm putting my car up for the winter. That'll mean more than $100 saved on gasoline, tires and incidentals.

Ball Vows Postwar Plan With Teeth

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, chief author of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill postwar resolution, put Congress on notice yesterday that provision for a United Nations military force of sufficient strength to enforce peace will be offered as an amendment to any less explicit congressional postwar commitment.

Senator Ball told newsmen that points 4 and 5 of his bipartisan resolution, providing international machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes, by joint military action of the United Nations Big Three if necessary, are essential insurance against World War III.

Back From Speaking Tour

Just back from a Coast-to-Coast speaking tour in which he teamed with Democratic House members for congressional action now, Ball opposed any effort to dodge the controversial issue of international policing in a generalized "lasting peace" commitment.

Ball said that as a younger member of the Senate he was making no threats, "but I do not think our group will be willing to sacrifice principles that give us our one chance of enduring peace because some people think we should drop them in the interest of so-called harmony."

Would Meet Issues Now

The young Minnesota Senator declared it would be far better for Congress to meet the issues now, "even if we lose, and I don't think we will," than to leave any doubts about the position of Congress. He said a defeat in Congress on central postwar issues can be taken to the people in the next election.

"To do nothing, to never meet issues until the last posible moment, to never take a positive position, has often in the past been good politics here in America and elsewhere," he said.

"To do nothing today is to invite disaster. A policy of drift, a policy of wait and see, a policy of delay until all the petty problems obscure the main issue has landed this peace-loving country in two wars in one generation."

Ball said it would not be necessary to maintain a large international force to prevent future aggression—"it would be peanuts in terms of what we are doing today." As Axis nations would be disarmed, he said the United States, Britain and Russia, acting in concert could prevent aggressive acts by other nations with comparatively small resources.

The Fulbright "lasting peace" resolution, reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, omits any reference to an international military force. So does the Vandenberg resolution to be presented to the Republican postwar conference at Macfinac Island, Mich. Both the House and the Senate Foreign Relations Committees have been expected to stick to generalities and avoid the policing controversy.

But it was considered significant that Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in a speech in Austin, Tex., last week, called for a postwar international agency "invested with power to enforce its decisions." Said Connally: "So long as the nations imposing the peace shall be ready and willing to maintain that peace by the last argument of military force, it will live."

Penny Milk Plan Sent Agriculture

His proposal, now under consideration by department officials at Baldrige's behest, is to continue under the old plan.

The Department of Agriculture this year has agreed only to pay a flat sum of 2 cents per half pint of milk, and it will be up to the District to meet the remaining cost. This, according to informed sources, it is prepared to do if Agriculture, in turn, will agree to adhere to the earlier contract arrangement.

"Baldrige recognizes the handicap we'd be under with the new proposal," Gardiner said, "and has promised to explain our situation to the 'higher-ups' when he confers with them.

"The principal object in all this discussion," he added, "is to assure an adequate supply of milk to our children at a daily cost to them of 1 cent for each half-pint portion. And this is something I am certain the Government as well as I would like to see done."

Gardiner thought a decision may be reached within a week.

Police, Fire Budgets Ask 7½ Millions

partment has been materially increased but no provision has been made for increasing the detective force in proportion to the uniformed force, although the work of that bureau has increased proportionately with that of the rest of the force.

Wartime activities, including requests made by the Department of Justice for investigation of subversive activities and draft evasion cases, was another argument voiced for the enlargement of the detective bureau.

To accomplish this the department requested $12,000 as additional compensation for privates doing crime prevention work. This would add 20 men to the detective force with an average increase in pay of $600 annually. This would mean no increase in the force as a whole, it was said. At the present time the detective bureau numbers 70 men.

The remainder of the increase in personnel costs would be taken up by temporary pay increases and raises.

Other obligations of the department, which include maintenance, purchase of new equipment and miscellaneous expenditure require an increase of $333,025. This represents a decrease of $175 in the amount currently being expended.

The largest single item in this figure is an estimated $170,625 to be spent for miscellaneous supplies and materials. This bracket includes everything from paper clips to ammunition and vehicles used by the department.

Additions of one patrol car, two cranes, 15 light cruisers and 15 motorcycles are requested. An estimated $35,000 is required for the purchase of gasoline and oil and $95,875 for the purchase of new uniforms.

A sum of $15,000 is required for the cost of subsistence and support of prisoners. At the present time the cost per meal for prisoners held at precincts is 15 cents. They are allowed two meals a day.

Repairs and improvement of police stations and grounds requires $8000 while repair to motor vehicles is estimated to run about $32,000.

No additional personnel will be added to next year's force, it is pointed out. The present authorized uniformed force is 1836 which is 201 over the current force.

An item of $607,500, not included in the Police Department budget, will be spent by that department. This sum is appropriated by the Highways Department and turned over to the Police Department for the control of highway traffic. The sum is identical with that turned over to the department last year.

The Fire Department budget asks $276,900 for overtime pay and salary increases with automatic promotions requiring $22,350. This represents a total increase in personal services of $299,360.

An estimated $35,410 is required for repairs to equipment while $41,340 is asked for the purchase of additional uniforms and fire fighting equipment. Fuel costs are expected to run $29,000.

Three additional pumping engines, costing $10,000 each, are asked for, as are thre ehose wagons at $9000 each. It is also requested that two aerial trucks, costing $22,000 each, be purchased.

To justify these expenditures it was stated that present similar equipment had been in use from 16 to 19 years.

As with the Police Department, most of the increase is for salary adjustments with no additional personnel sought. At the present the department has 940 uniformed personnel, which is 71 under its authorized strength of 1011.

Tax Squabble May Sidetrack Any New Bill for This Year

by Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia of the Senate Finance Committee, with Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina the vice chairman. Colin F. Stam heads the staff of tax experts employed by Congress under supervision of the joint committee.

Doughton has announced that the Ways and Means Committee will begin study of a new general revenue measure, looking toward higher levies. But informed persons on Capitol Hill see a possibility that the new controversy plus the length of public hearings may delay completion of the measure until next spring.

If there is such a delay, any new rates on individual or corporate incomes may not become effective until 1945, because the Ways and Means Committee already has gone on record as opposing any retroactive taxes.

A similar controversy developed between the Treasury and the tax staff last year, and Congress forthwith wrote into the 1942 general revenue act a proviso that the staff legally may obtain information from any Government department or bureau, as it pleases, without consulting the Treasury Department.

Some Treasury officials are understood to doubt the constitutionality of such a procedure.

Morgenthau is said to feel that the congressional staff might probe into tax proposals being studied by the Treasury, and handicap the presentation of a precise Administration tax program. The congressional staff has not been invited to attend interdepartmental sessions on taxation held at the Treasury.

Meanwhile, the congressional tax staff takes the position that it has no desire to interfere with the formulation of an Administration program, but wants information by which to devise a program of its own.

Welders Strike At St. Louis Airplane Plant

St. Louis, Sept. 2 (AP).—A strike of welders, called under terms of the War Labor Disputes Act, began today at Curtiss-Wright Corporation's St. Louis airplane division.

A company spokesman said the walkout, while not immediately affecting other departments, eventually would force curtailment of operations.

The United Brotherhood of Weldors, Cutters and Helpers (Independent) ordered the strike in a demand for the establishment of a separate bargaining unit for its members at the plant.

The International Association of Machinists (Independent) is the certified plant-wide bargaining agent.

In an election last night, 89 per cent of the welders voted for a work interruption. Other production and maintenance workers voted 89 per cent against a strike.

Veteran Rescued Buddie in Battle

Soldier, Now Wounded, Wears Medal For Gallantry in Tunisia Struggle

(This is the sixteenth of a series of interviews with wounded veterans of this war now convalescing at Walter Reed Hospital.

By Hanson H. Hathaway
Post Staff Writer

A medium American tank, with Sergt. Charles B. Vonder Embse, 25, of Kalida, Ohio, commanding, detached itself from the retreating tank force being beaten back by the heavy guns of the German Mark IV's.

The battle of Pont du Fahs in Tunisia was not yet over, nor would it be until gallantly fighting Americans reformed and again took up the gage of action they were reluctantly declining under the superior fire-power of the enemy.

But Sergt. Vonder Embse, holder of the Silver Star for gallantry that shone above that of his comrades in the eyes of military authorities, had no thought of heroics for medals as he slapped the shoulders of the tank's steerer and brought the lumbering death machine around.

Vonder Embse

It now faced the narrow gorge of Pont du Fahs. Machine guns, mortars and light artillery were making an inferno of flame, sound and death up ahead.

Tank Out of Range

For what he was about to do, his tank, with the name "Kalida" painted on its explosion-graved sides, was protection up to a point. And that was up there ahead at a spot where it could be safely left out of reach of the searching guns, while he went forward to save a boy who had failed to come out of the gorge battle with the rest.

The tank poised for a moment, Sergt. Vonder Embse bore his glasses down on the gorge and relocated the hell-blasted sanctuary of rock behind which his wounded buddy had taken refuge.

The glasses rushed the stricken face of the wounded man almost into his face.

So . . .

"Some kids in another tank had come up and told me that this other kid was missing," Sergt. Vonder Embse started his story. "We couldn't go back just then because the Mark IV's were knocking us off like rabbits. Our mediums couldn't stand up to them. I took the tank off side where I could get a look at the narrow slot between the hills where the Germans started beating us back.

More Maneuvering.

"Pretty soon I could make him out, and I decided to go back in after him, Germans or no Germans, tanks or no tanks.

"The rest of the kids in the tank were agreeable, so we brought old 'Kalida' up to this point around the edge of the hills where the artillery couldn't get a swipe at us. And then . . .

Sergt. Vonder Embse crawled out of the turret to perform one of the most audacious rescues in the annals of ths war.

German observers seeing the lone figure scrambling over the rocks on the hillside opposite for a time made sport of him with their rifles. Perhaps suddenly they saw in him a threat to their hardily held positions; for there was a quick chattering stream of machine-gun fire so violent the dust raised by their impact around him formed a screen through which he ran crouchingly and desperate.

In and out of these little dust screens he ran. And each time he emerged the machine-gun fire increased.

Trigger Nervous Germans

"And, I could never understand this," he recalled, "they opened fire with small mortars. They must have thought I was on some single-handed maneuver that didn't mean any good for them. Some of these Germans, and especially the Eyties, get awfully jittery at times."

"I guess God was with me all right," he said. "I finally got up to him. He was half out and I gave him a shot of morphine to ease him off. He was quiet about it, though."

"Did he recognize you, Sergeant?"

"Yeah, he did."

There was abashed reticence in Vonder Embse's tone.

"Did he say anything?"

Man of action, Yank in a Tank Vonder Embse could only say: "Why did you bring that up?"

"Come on, Sergeant——"

"Oh, well. He said 'Van, by jiggers, I knew if anybody'd came back for me, you would.'"

Shoot at Wounded Man

It has been said Germans are fair fighters and, under some conditions, this has, perhaps, been true. Maybe these particular troops subscribed to total war, the killing of any and every body connected with their foe's service, regardless of their status.

For——

"I could hardly believe it. They saw me dragging this kid. They had to see me. And yet they poured it into us . . . I was almost ready to give up and take cover until night, but was afraid because maybe this kid might die. You know how it is.

"Then I saw I could get out of range by carrying him around a jutting out part of the hill. I did this and the rest wasn't so hard. I put him down and ran back to my tank and went back and got him. He had one hell of a jolting until we got him where the medics could look after him."

A machine-gun bullet crippled Vonder Embse's arm as he stood exposed in his tank turret directing his unit's part in the attack on McKnassy, Tunisia. The war ended then for this stalwart son of country blacksmiths, whose families were headed by a great grandfather who started the American line of an old German family.

3 Soldiers From D. C. Area Reported Wounded in Action

Second Lieut. Ralph W. Vernon, Corpl Robert R. Stanley, and Pvt. Donn W. Campbell are reported wounded in action in the North African area, the War Department announced yesterday.

VERNON

Lieutenant Vernon, 27, of 4403 Oliver st., Hyattsville, Md., was wounded July 11. According to a letter received recently by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Vernon, of the same address, he has been decorated with the Purple Heart and the Silver Star.

Born in Standardsville, Va., he attended the public schools there and was employed by the Western Electric Co. prior to his induction in May, 1941.

He was stationed at Fort Meade, Md., and Fort Myer, Va., and received his commission at Fort Benning, Ga., last December. A month later he was sent overseas.

His wife, who works in the finance office of the Prince Georges County Welfare Board, was notified by the War Department August 17, that Lieutenant Vernon would be sent home on furlough soon..

A native of Montgomery County, Md., Corporal Stanley, 31, of Rockville, was a dealer in gas appliances before his induction in February, 1941. He was released that same year because of overage, but was called back to duty shortly after Pearl Harbor.

CAMPBELL

Corporal Stanley was sent overseas last October to take part in the initial invasion of North Africa.

His sister, Mrs. Esther Warfield, who lives at 9409 Woodlawn Drive, Silver Spring, Md., said yesterday that she had received a letter from him recently in which he said that he had been released from the hospital July 26 and was then serving with his unit.

A native Washingtonian, Private Campbell, 21, 4610 Harling Lane, Bethesda, Md., is a graduate of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. He worked as a supply clerk for the War Department before his induction, May 9, 1942.

STANLEY

After taking his basic training at Camp Wheeler, Ga., he was sent overseas last February. His wife, Mrs. Noreen Campbell of the same address, who works for the Public Health Service in Bethesda, has received word that he has been decorated with the Purple Heart. In a recent letter to her, Private Campbell promised to bring home some of the shrapnel, with which he was wounded, as a souvenir.

Pvt. First Class Joseph J. Howell of Baltimore, Md., Pvt. First Class Clifford W. Carroll of Jonesville, Va., and Pvt Maurice R. Harris of South Norfolk, Va., have also been listed as wounded in action.

the Tokyo radio. An enemy broadcast quoted an imperial headquarters communique as saying that "90 Grumman fighters" and "about 60 carrier bombers" from two American aircraft carriers made the raid.

The Domei broadcast admitted that damage was done to the Marcus Island base, but claimed that 12 of the American planes were shot down. A later radio report said that "slight damage" resulted to planes on the ground but damage to personnel and military installations was "almost negligible."

In the absence of any further official word as to the Marcus Island attack, speculation here centered on the possibility that the powerful American carrier force which hit the enemy base might deliver additional and even heavier blows momentarily. The task force is still somewhere in the Western Pacific, possibly within range of other enemy bases.

Opinion is that the Marcus assault was the first of a series of raids designed to bleed the enemy rather than to seize possession of outposts.

Such hit-and-run raids, like the jabs and body blows of a boxer, can have telling effect, even though less spectacular than a haymaker. Japan must rebuild and replace the base installations destroyed by the attacks, a task that requires shipping. And Tokyo is hard pressed for ships.

Planes Must Be Sent

Morover, planes must be sent to the blasted bases not only as replacements for those destroyed but to strengthen them. As Japan also is pressed for planes, the active fighting fronts are bound to suffer.

The result may be to force the enemy to withdraw to shorter defense lines or to seriously weaken some points to an extent that they would fall easily to an attack in force.

Fortresses Seen As Necessitating New Defense

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—British Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert said tonight that "it almost looks as though the Fortress type of bomber has defeated the contemporary fighter."

If that is so, "a new solution to the problem of defense will have to be found" in aerial combat, he said in a radio war commentary.

"The great fire power of a close formation of Flying Fortresses was the reason why they could battle their way through a horde of enemy fighters, reach and bomb their target accurately and get away with losses which in the circumstances were moderate," he stated.

Cargo Ships Built in August Totaled 164

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

America's shipbuilding goal of at least 19 million deadweight tons by the end of 1943 drew appreciably nearer in August when 164 cargo vessels were turned out, 6 more than in the preceding month.

The August delivery is regarded as another heartening step forward since the number of ships increased despite changes in construction calling for larger vessels. Even July's total of 158 vessels, which was nine short of June production, was labeled "good" for the same reason.

Cargo production in American shipyards for the first eight months of the year now amounts to 1210 vessels totaling 12,182,900 deadweight tons, which is quite in excess of our entire merchant marine prior to Pearl Harbor.

Types Built in August

The total of 164 vessels included 110 Liberty ships, 15 C-types, 15 Maritime Commission tankers, 1 private tanker, 4 Maritime Commission coastal tankers, 2 private coastal tankers, 6 special types, 6 sea-going tugs, 2 ore carriers and 4 concrete barges.

While on one hand pressing for constantly increasing ship production, the Maritime Commission is gradually cutting back other programs now found undesirable either because of inefficiency or unwarranted expense.

Two recent steps toward cutbacks is the concrete barge program and the wooden barge and tug program, both of which were adopted reluctantly at the start of the war because of pressure and the emergency shortage of any type of water craft.

Contracts for concrete barges have already been reduced from 65 to 33 vessels with the indication that the commission would like to "get from under" this entire program on the theory that good money and manpower is being wasted.

Likewise, the commission is cutting down on the construction of wooden auxiliary craft and has ordered builders to deliver the rest of the vessels contracted for by the end of this year when no further contracts are expected to be awarded.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2 (AP).—The American Lithuanian Association, opening its national convention today, announced as one of its principal objectives the re-establishment of the Lithuanian republic after the war.

Exchange Ship Gripsholm Sails for Orient, 1300 Japs Aboard

By the Associated Press

The exchange liner Gripsholm put out from New York Harbor for the Orient yesterday, carrying with her the high hopes of relatives back home for a safe return with 1250 American men, women and children who have been in Japanese hands since Pearl Harbor.

The big Swedish liner had aboard 1330 Japanese civilians who are being repatriated. Another 173 Japanese are to be picked up at Rio de Janeiro.

On the basis of the Gripsholm's time on her first exchange trip last year, it may be early December before the Americans being brought back may walk on the free soil of their homeland again.

In the Gripsholm's hold are large quantities of relief supplies and medicines for American prisoners of war and civilians still interned in the Orient, including the Philippines.

Brilliantly Lighted

To make the Gripsholm as free as possible from any mistaken attack on her journey, she was provided with brilliant electric lights, including some billboard-type reflectors projected over the side and shining on the hull. She travels without convoy, under guarantee of safe conduct by all belligerents.

Exchange About October 15.

There, about October 15, the exchange will take place, and about 1250 United States nationals and some 250 nationals of the other American republics and Canada will be picked up. The Japanese are bringing these Americans in their exchange ship, Teia Maru.

The first exchange took place more than a year ago at Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa.

Radios announce her position at intervals.

This is one ship that tries to be conspicuous.

Culminating more than a year of negotiations with the Japanese Government through neutral intermediaries, the Gripsholm's voyage this time is to Mormugao, chief port of the Portuguese colony of Goa on the West Coast of India.

The State Department emphacized yesterday that the Gripsholm passenger list cannot be complete until the Teia Maru has left her last port of call which is expected to be about October 1. As soon as the list is completed, the State Department will notify relatives and will then publish the list.

of the Solomons, the most notable gain in the tightening drive on Salamaua was credited to Yankee infantrymen working several miles south of the objective along the coastal area.

It was indicated that the Americans had by-passed a tough Japanese position, which now is virtually surrounded, and then pushed on three-quarters of a mile along a ridge which overlooks Salamaua itself.

Meanwhile, Australian troops, working from the southwest, had reached a point 2 miles or less from the north of the Francisco River. This would place the Aussies almost at the edge of the air strip because the river flows past the field to empty into the sea.

Air and surface forces continued their attacks on supply routes of the Salamaua defenders. Ten barges were destroyed along New Britain's south coast.

3 Packers Given Jail Terms on Sale Violations

Detroit, Sept. 2 (AP).—Three Detroit meat packers were given prison sentences and heavy fines today in Federal Court by Judge Frank A. Picard following their convictions on charges of violating Office of Price Administration regulations in the sale of meat.

Edward Garber, head of the Garber Packing Co., was sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $14,000. Judge Picard later ruled that in the event he pays the fine seven years would be dropped from his prison term.

A six-month prison term and a $4000 fine was given David Aaron, head of the Bay State Packing Co., and Charles H. Klegon, secretary-treasurer of the United Beef Co.,

WPB Will Discontinue Used Hosiery Salvage

Collection of used silk and nylon stockings under the wartime salvage program will be discontinued after September 30, the War Production Board announced yesterday.

Paul C. Cabot, director of WPB's salvage division, said the public response to the stocking salvage appeal has been "amazing." More than 46 million pairs of used stockings were collected up to August 31.

"BACK THE ATTACK WITH WAR BONDS"
HERE ARE 4 TIPS ON HOW TO BUY AN EXTRA $100 WAR BOND EACH YEAR

WAR WORKER:
Sure I'm putting more than 10% of my income into war bonds, but my wife figures that one meatless day a week at home will make it easy for us to buy an additional $100 bond.

MAN-ABOUT-TOWN:
Well I'm a bachelor and buying an extra $100 bond is easy. I just stay home one weekend a month. You'd be surprised what I save.

BUSINESS MAN:
Same way at our house. Each member of the family has agreed to forego one pet pleasure so we can buy a bond that will be used to get some household appliance after the war is over.

SALESMAN:
You help the country's transportation problem, too. For my part, I'm putting my car up for the winter. That'll mean more than $100 saved on gasoline, tires and incidentals.

To Back the Attack with an extra $15,000,000,000 means YOU must help, too

Ball Vows Postwar Plan With Teeth

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, chief author of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill postwar resolution, put Congress on notice yesterday that provision for a United Nations military force of sufficient strength to enforce peace will be offered as an amendment to any less explicit congressional postwar commitment.

Senator Ball told newsmen that points 4 and 5 of his bipartisan resolution, providing international machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes, by joint military action of the United Nations Big Three if necessary, are essential insurance against World War III.

Back From Speaking Tour

Just back from a Coast-to-Coast speaking tour in which he teamed with Democratic House members for congressional action now, Ball opposed any effort to dodge the controversial issue of international policing in a generalized "lasting peace" commitment.

Ball said that as a younger member of the Senate he was making no threats, "but I do not think our group will be willing to sacrifice principles that give us our one chance of enduring peace because some people think we should drop them in the interest of so-called harmony."

Would Meet Issues Now

The young Minnesota Senator declared it would be far better for Congress to meet the issues now, "even if we lose, and I don't think we will," than to leave any doubts about the position of Congress. He said a defeat in Congress on central postwar issues can be taken to the people in the next election.

"To do nothing, to never meet issues until the last posible moment, to never take a positive position, has often in the past been good politics here in America and elsewhere," he said.

"To do nothing today is to invite disaster. A policy of drift, a policy of wait and see, a policy of delay until all the petty problems obscure the main issue has landed this peace-loving country in two wars in one generation."

Ball said it would not be necessary to maintain a large international force to prevent future aggression—"it would be peanuts in terms of what we are doing today." As Axis nations would be disarmed, he said the United States, Britain and Russia, acting in concert could prevent aggressive acts by other nations with comparatively small resources.

The Fulbright "lasting peace" resolution, reported by the House Foreign Affairs Committee, omits any reference to an international military force. So does the Vandenberg resolution to be presented to the Republican postwar conference at Macfinac Island, Mich. Both the House and the Senate Foreign Relations Committees have been expected to stick to generalities and avoid the policing controversy.

But it was considered significant that Senator Tom Connally of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in a speech in Austin, Tex., last week, called for a postwar international agency "invested with power to enforce its decisions." Said Connally: "So long as the nations imposing the peace shall be ready and willing to maintain that peace by the last argument of military force, it will live."

Penny Milk Plan Sent Agriculture

His proposal, now under consideration by department officials at Baldrige's behest, is to continue under the old plan.

The Department of Agriculture this year has agreed only to pay a flat sum of 2 cents per half pint of milk, and it will be up to the District to meet the remaining cost. This, according to informed sources, it is prepared to do if Agriculture, in turn, will agree to adhere to the earlier contract arrangement.

"Baldrige recognizes the handicap we'd be under with the new proposal," Gardiner said, "and has promised to explain our situation to the 'higher-ups' when he confers with them.

"The principal object in all this discussion," he added, "is to assure an adequate supply of milk to our children at a daily cost to them of 1 cent for each half-pint portion. And this is something I am certain the Government as well as I would like to see done."

Gardiner thought a decision may be reached within a week.

Police, Fire Budgets Ask 7½ Millions

partment has been materially increased but no provision has been made for increasing the detective force in proportion to the uniformed force, although the work of that bureau has increased proportionately with that of the rest of the force.

Wartime activities, including requests made by the Department of Justice for investigation of subversive activities and draft evasion cases, was another argument voiced for the enlargement of the detective bureau.

To accomplish this the department requested $12,000 as additional compensation for privates doing crime prevention work. This would add 20 men to the detective force with an average increase in pay of $600 annually. This would mean no increase in the force as a whole, it was said. At the present time the detective bureau numbers 70 men.

The remainder of the increase in personnel costs would be taken up by temporary pay increases and raises.

Other obligations of the department, which include maintenance, purchase of new equipment and miscellaneous expenditure require an increase of $333,025. This represents a decrease of $175 in the amount currently being expended.

The largest single item in this figure is an estimated $170,625 to be spent for miscellaneous supplies and materials. This bracket includes everything from paper clips to ammunition and vehicles used by the department.

Additions of one patrol car, two cranes, 15 light cruisers and 15 motorcycles are requested. An estimated $35,000 is required for the purchase of gasoline and oil and $95,875 for the purchase of new uniforms.

A sum of $15,000 is required for the cost of subsistence and support of prisoners. At the present time the cost per meal for prisoners held at precincts is 15 cents. They are allowed two meals a day.

Repairs and improvement of police stations and grounds requires $8000 while repair to motor vehicles is estimated to run about $32,000.

No additional personnel will be added to next year's force, it is pointed out. The present authorized uniformed force is 1836 which is 201 over the current force.

An item of $607,500, not included in the Police Department budget, will be spent by that department. This sum is appropriated by the Highways Department and turned over to the Police Department for the control of highway traffic. The sum is identical with that turned over to the department last year.

The Fire Department budget asks $276,900 for overtime pay and salary increases with automatic promotions requiring $22,350. This represents a total increase in personal services of $289,860.

An estimated $35,410 is required for repairs to equipment while $41,340 is asked for the purchase of additional uniforms and fire fighting equipment. Fuel costs are expected to run $29,000.

Three additional pumping engines, costing $10,000 each, are asked for, as are thre ehose wagons at $9000 each. It is also requested that two aerial trucks, costing $22,000 each, be purchased.

To justify these expenditures it was stated that present similar equipment had been in use from 16 to 19 years.

As with the Police Department, most of the increase is for salary adjustments with no additional personnel sought. At the present the department has 940 uniformed personnel, which is 71 under its authorized strength of 1011.

Tax Squabble May Sidetrack Any New Bill for This Year

by Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia of the Senate Finance Committee, with Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina the vice chairman. Colin F. Stam heads the staff of tax experts employed by Congress under supervision of the joint committee.

Doughton has announced that the Ways and Means Committee will begin study of a new general revenue measure, looking toward higher levies. But informed persons on Capitol Hill see a possibility that the new controversy plus the length of public hearings may delay completion of the measure until next spring.

If there is such a delay, any new rates on individual or corporate incomes may not become effective until 1945, because the Ways and Means Committee already has gone on record as opposing any retroactive taxes.

A similar controversy developed between the Treasury and the tax staff last year, and Congress forthwith wrote into the 1942 general revenue act a proviso that the staff legally may obtain information from any Government department or bureau, as it pleases, without consulting the Treasury Department.

Some Treasury officials are understood to doubt the constitutionality of such a procedure.

Morgenthau is said to feel that the congressional staff might probe into tax proposals being studied by the Treasury, and handicap the presentation of a precise Administration tax program. The congressional staff has not been invited to attend interdepartmental sessions on taxation held at the Treasury.

Meanwhile, the congressional tax staff takes the position that it has no desire to interfere with the formulation of an Administration program, but wants information by which to devise a program of its own.

Welders Strike At St. Louis Airplane Plant

St. Louis, Sept. 2 (AP).—A strike of welders, called under terms of the War Labor Disputes Act, began today at Curtiss-Wright Corporation's St. Louis airplane division.

A company spokesman said the walkout, while not immediately affecting other departments, eventually would force curtailment of operations.

The United Brotherhood of Weldors, Cutters and Helpers (Independent) ordered the strike in a demand for the establishment of a separate bargaining unit for its members at the plant.

The International Association of Machinists (Independent) is the certified plant-wide bargaining agent.

In an election last night, 89 per cent of the welders voted for a work interruption. Other production and maintenance workers voted 89 per cent against a strike.

33 Sedition Suspects Still Operating

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

The 33 alleged seditionists, indicted by a Federal grand jury here in March for conspiring with a Nazi propaganda chieftain to undermine the loyalty of the armed forces of the United States, were still "nursing subscriptions" to their propaganda sheets, soliciting 10 cents, 25 cents and dollar donations to their "funds" to help fight the "Red government's" case in "behalf of God and country," and otherwise circulating their dogma, The Post learned yesterday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, whose book, "The Red Network," brands virtually every anti-Nazi public figure as a dangerous radical, is currently reported making the rounds of West Coast war production and shipyard centers. Under the auspices of local "crackpot' groups, she is exhorting crowds to believe that the war is merely a "camouflage" for the "internationalists" who are taking over this country, "just as they are now running England."

Gerald B. Winrod is said to be similarly engaged in Detroit.

Despite this extensive activity, Mrs. Dilling is continuing her contacts with Congress — principally, according to the Reporter of Direct Mail Advertising, with Representative Hamilton Fish.

Fish's Amendment

Fish recently introduced an amendment to the sedition law, the purpose of which, according to this report, is to hamstring the sedition trials. He and several other formerly isolationist congressmen have consistently branded the Government's indictment as "persecution" of the alleged conspirators. His own committee to keep America out of foreign wars was named in the indictment as a "tool" of the Nazi-inspired plot.

Mrs. Dilling, it was learned, has been plugging this amendment in current issues of her "Patriotic Research Bureau Newsletter," and mailing copies to extensive lists under Fish's frank.

Although probably the "noisest" of the indicted group, Mrs. Dilling is reportedly not the only one of them to whom the New York congressman has sent copies of his amendment speech and franked envelopes. An informed source at the Department of Justice stated yesterday it was "a fact" that at least two or three others awaiting trial on the conspiracy charge have been sent similar material for mailing purposes.

Typical of the sniping at the war effort in the sheets being published and widely circulated by these people, are excerpts from The Broom, mouthpiece of C. Leon de Aryan, described as a West Coast "mystic" and rabble rouser. Like its counterparts, this publication carefully avoids any direct exhortation to the United States Army, Navy or their personnel, thereby avoiding immediate curtailment under the Espionage Act of 1917.

Every other means, however, is used to discourage faith in the Administration and the conduct of the war.

View on Plane Crash

The July 19 issue of The Broom prints a "news story" headed, "Army and Navy Welcome Reports of Recklessness of Aviators," and describing the death of four children in California as the result of an airplane crash.

Another excerpt from a July 5 issue of one of these publications carries the following story:

Headed, "Not All the Tragedies of War Take Place on the Battlefield," it goes on to describe the tragic widowing of a young mother when her handsome husband "died after Army injections."

Although clearly intended to worry civilians and the families of servicemen, stories of this kind are permitted circulation through the mails. The Criminal Division of the Department of Justice this week was reported to be "unable" to recommend their ban to the Postoffice Department, since, technically, they do not come within the small "legal area" described by Sections 11 and 33 of the Espionage Act.

Navy Blimps to Relay News of Fish Schools

Fish as well as enemy submarines have become the prey of Navy blimps patrolling Pacific Northwest waters, Interior Secretary Ickes reported yesterday.

The Navy has agreed to have its blimps radio to fishing vessels whenever schools of fish are located, he said. The schools can be spotted easily from the air but might take fishermen hours to locate.

City Gardens Still Thrive In Drought

Despite Washington's worst drought in 35 years, 90 per cent of the city's gardeners are still tilling soil and reaping harvests, J. Morton Franklin, District victory garden supervisor, reported yesterday at a regular meeting of the local victory garden committee. He said also the garden effort had resulted in a revival of community spirit.

At the same time plans for a victory garden exhibition and show where winners of citywide contests will be announced and prizes awarded was scheduled by Richard P. White, show chairman, for September 15 in the Washington Gas Light Co. auditorium.

Preliminary area judgings of the best victory gardens in the city and surrounding areas were held earlier in the summer, and the second area judging is now taking place, White said. The grand award team will judge September 8, 9 and 10.

Prizes will be awarded at 8:30 o'clock in the evening to those having the best gardens and also to winners of canned goods and fresh vegetable contests, entries for which will be on display in the auditorium. Twenty varieties of seasonal vegetables will be judged: String beans, lima beans, beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, corn, cucumber, eggplant, kale, okra, onion, parsnip, peppers, potatoes, squash (pumpkin), sweet potatoes, swiss chard and tomatoes.

Many local gardens have been saved from drying up by water from the Anacostia River and from fire hydrants, Franklin announced. He said further watering may be necessary if more rain does not fall soon.

Meanwhile fall planing is continued and in some areas gardeners are already beginning to sign up for next year's plots.

Seventy-six community areas containing 2281 public gardens were prepared under supervision of the victory garden office, this year, it was said. In addition chairmen appointed in each neighborhood defense area were kept supplied with informaion with which to assist home gardeners as well as community gardners. Sixteen thousand home gardens were developed through the schools, it was said.

Group to Meet Today in Study Of Pollution

A special committee headed by Col. Joseph A. Arthur, jr., assistant engineer commissioner, will meet this afternoon to make a preliminary study of the pollution of the Anacostia area water supply.

The committee was appointed Wednesday by the District Commissioners upon the request of the Health Department, which had found water supplied to that area heavily polluted. Bacillus colisewage born bacteria were found in drinking water in that area tested by the Health Department.

Additional chlorination immediately was added to prevent the spread of any disease, but the Health Department asked for a complete study so the source of the infection may be found and controlled.

Beside Arthur, members of the committee delegated to study the situation are: Maj. John B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer; Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, and a representative of the United States District Engineer's office.

Stock Producers Hear Attacks On Meat Program

Kansas City, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Government's meat program was called "bureaucracy stupidity" today before 1400 livestock producers whose leaders said they came from 24 States to rally strength behind a plan of their own to relax regulations.

Two of their number, Chris J. Abbott of Hyannis, Nebr., and Frank S. Boice of Sonita, Ariz., charged that producers of the Nation's beef steaks and pork chops had lost confidence in the Administration's program.

Boice, president of the American Livestock Association, said that under the meat management plan the demand could be regulated by flexible sliding ration point values, disposing of the need for retail ceilings and slaughter quotas. Under the plan, Boice said, Government needs would be taken care of first.

New Mounting Evidence May Prolong Probe of Water Unit

Study of a large volume of additional and unexpected evidence will prolong the investigation into the affairs of the Water Department now being made by a special committee appointed by the District Commissioners, The Post learned yesterday.

Chairman Richmond B. Keech, Corporation Counsel, said the committee heard testimony of several witnesses yesterday and will meet Wednesday to hear other witnesses.

Keech said it was impossible to tell just when the committee would wind up its investigation and make recommendations, but Capitol Hill sources said the report was expected shortly after Congress returns on September 15.

The Commissioners appointed an investigating committee after the release of a blistering attack upon the water registrar's office made last spring by Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren.

Meat Points To Drop; More For Butter

points to encourage the movement of this sized container. Dried beans will go down 2 points, while peas and lentils will drop 3 points.

Frozen Fruits Up

All frozen fruits or berries, beans, cut corn, peas and spinach will go up three points for each average-sized container. Canned apples increase three points; peaches, four points; pears, six points.

Four important items on the Thanksgiving dinner—cranberries, cranberry sauce, pumpkin and squash—go up two points per No. 2½ can.

Dried prunes and raisins go back on the ration list at a value of four points a pound, a relative low point price considered favorable to bakers and other industrial consumers of large quantities of raisins.

Liberators Blast Mandalay Rails

New Delhi, Sept. 2 (AP).—Liberator bombers of the United States Tenth Air Force dumped a "great weight" of explosives on the railway yards at Mandalay yesterday, it was announced today in a headquarters communique which said "excellent results were reported with numerous hits in the target area."

While the four-engined Liberators concentrated on Mandalay, twin-engined B-25 Mitchells attacked Japanese rail installations and communications in other parts of central Burma. All planes returned safely from the day's operations, the bulletin said.

Table of New Food Values

New point values on the meat and fats ration chart effective Sunday will reflect the following significant ups and downs:

Argentina to Retain Political Asylum Policy

Buenos Aires, Sept. 2 (AP).—Commenting on President Roosevelt's request that neutral countries refuse refuge to "war criminals," the newspaper La Prensa indicated today that Argentina would adhere to "her traditional attitude" of granting asylum to political leaders.

The newspaper, one of the largest and most influential in Argentina, added that the policy of asylum for political leaders has been accepted by all American republics except the United States and Haiti.

Pimples Make Many Look Diseased

Do ugly, red, disfiguring Pimples make you look diseased and feel socially inferior? Have you tried a lot of things with little help? Well, many cases of the most stubborn Pimples, Acne, Eczema-like Rash, Blotches, Ringworm, Itching Skin and Athlete's Foot often are due to surface, non-systemic skin troubles. In such cases, Nixoderm (a physician's prescription) usually starts to work helping the skin look clearer, softer, smoother with the very first application. Nixoderm works while you sleep and in 3 nights must bring a delightful improvement in your appearance or your money back is guaranteed. Get Nixoderm from your druggist and see how fast it helps your skin.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

Burning of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

WMC Urges Women to Accept War Jobs With Greater Speed

American women must accept war jobs twice as rapidly during the next six months as they have so far this year, and should form the habit of staying with the work they have selected, the War Manpower Commission declared yesterday.

Almost one million women will have to be drawn into the labor force of the country during the six months if 900,000 "net" additional workers are on the job next July, it was estimated.

In many larger plants, officials declared, almost as many women are leaving jobs as are taking them—and this tremendous turnover is wasteful, expensive and inefficient, although at times understandable.

"The Women's Advisory Committee has been after the War Manpower Commission to see that a more effective coordination of services is provided. We have recommended that the Commission assume responsibility for this coordination, and we believe there is a growing tendency to attack this thing realistically," declared Margaret Hickey, the committee's chairman.

The "retreat from war jobs" in many parts of the country is "very serious," Miss Hickey said.

Short shifts of from 4 to 6 hours are being tried out in some places and may help solve part of the problem facing women who try to keep house and have war jobs, too, it was said.

At present the most readily available group of women consists of nonfarm housewives between the ages of 20 and 55 without children under 16, the commission stated in a report released at a press conference. This group in April numbered 5,600,000.

"However, in view of the localization of demand and the completely voluntary basis of recruitment, there is no assurance that an adequate number of women will enter the labor market where they are needed," it stated.

About 17,100,000 women are working today, compared with 14,100,000 a year ago, and 10,800,000 in 1940, according to WMC figures.

Stalingrad Lifts Red Glory

The situation, in the autumn, was acute for the actual defenders of Stalingrad. General Chuikov's army headquarters still within the city, were often more advnaced than divisional or regimental headquarters, and often under the automatic gun-fire of the enemy. Five times Chuikov had to move his base, once because it was flooded by burning gasoline, at other times because its communications were severed. At one critical moment he ordered his chief of staff to go to the east bank of the Volga, planning himself to remain in Stalingrad. Krilov, shuffling his feet, stood silent. Finally, another member of the staff stepped forward and spoke for him: "Let's win or die together." They stayed together.

HENRY C. CASSIDY

Plight Desperate

The Volga was not frozen in mid-November. Ice-floes broke the Red army pontoon bridge and barge crossings, so that the plight of the defenders inside the city was more desperate than ever.

What was true of the fronts around Stalingrad was that, while the Sixty-second army was bearing the brunt of the German attack on the city, a mass of men and materials was being assembled on the enemy flanks. The Germans, having made the mistake of putting insufficient forces into the Stalingrad assault, made another mistake of persistnig stubbornly in their original plan. While they were attacking at this single point, and to a lesser extent in the Caucasus, they left the Red armies free elsewhere all along the front. In fact, except at Stalingrad and in the Caucasus, the Russians held the initiative generally.

The real Red Army forces was gathering around Stalingrad. A general reorganization was under way. The entire Soviet front, which had originally been divided into three groups, each a large unwieldy organization of more than 100 divisions, under Voroshilov, Timoshenko, and Budenny, was made over into 12 compact fighting forces, each commanded by a skilful professional soldier and supplied with hard striking power. At the top of this organization was Stalin, with his own representatives to coordinate the actions of the fronts.

Now, the Germans held most of Stalingrad, but all around them was gathering a storm—a storm that broke November 19, 1942.

On that day, three Red Army groups launched the Russian counteroffensive, long and carefully planned, northwest and southwest of Stalingrad. The fronts were the southwest, commanded by Gen. Nikolai Vatuin; the Don, commanded by Gen. Konstantin Rokossovsky; and the Stalingrad, commanded by General Yeremenko. The objective was to break through the enemy flanks and to encircle the Germans at Stalingrad. By November 23, they had succeeded. On that day, units from the northwest and southwest met at Kalach and turned east, facing the German Sixth Army and part of the German Fourth Tank Army, surrounded by a thin strip of Red Army forces.

The encirclement movement was considered by the Soviet command as the greatest ever executed, exceeding anything the Germans had carried out in the first year of the war. Inside the Red Army ring were 22 divisions, with other artillery and engineers' regiments and battalions, about 100,000 men in all. Moreover, the Russians were soon to put to flight a relief expedition the Germans sent under Von Mannstein to rescue the encircled force.

German 'Defenders'

From that moment the German Sixth Army was doomed. From that moment the battle of Stalingrad developed in two separate actions—against the group encircled before Stalingrad, and against the lines sagging far to the south and west.

The German besiegers of Stalingrad became, in turn, according to their Fuehrer's communiques, 'the defenders of Stalingrad.' They dug in deep in the basements of the city and the holes of the steppes. They received 25 or 30 cartridges daily, with orders to use them only in self-defense. Their daily rations dwindled to four ounces of bread and a portion of horse-meat. This period produced one of the classic remarks of the war, made by a German prisoner who plaintively told his Red Army captors:

"We've eaten up our cavalry."

But it was no joking matter, the reduction of this force which was encircled but refused to yield.

Dispatch of Victory

The conclusion of the battle, greatest certainly of this war, and perhaps of any war, was reported to Stalin by a dispatch from Voronov and Rokossovsky in simple words:

Carrying out your orders, the troops of the Don front at 4 p. m., February 2, finished the rout and annihilation of the encircled enemy troops at Stalingrad.

On the fronts to the north, west, and south, the Red army pressed on with its second winter campaign. Everything that had happened there had a direct relation to the battle of Stalingrad itself. All was woven together by one mind in the Kremlin, to make a general winter defeat of the Germans.

To the north, the Red army attacked and captured Velikie Luki, guarding the vital sector between Moscow and Leningrad.

To the south, the Red army pursued the enemy out of the Caucasus.

Another Red army offensive broke the Hungarian forces on the Voronezh front in mid-January. Six Magyar divisions were destroyed, together with a motley collection of Italians and Germans. The entire southern half of the Red army line was now rolling west, with troops of the Voronezh front, under Gen. Filip Golikov, and of the Bryansk front, under Gen. Max Reuter, joining those who had started the surge from Stalingrad.

'Days of the Dead'

Second in drama only to the battle of Stalingrad was the act then being played at Leningrad. This city, second in size only to Moscow in the Soviet Union, and second to none in sentimental attachments for the Russian people, had been under siege since September, 1941. Second to none had been the sufferings of its people, who had lived—or died—on 4 ounces of bread daily during the first winter of the war, and were now undergoing another such winter.

But nothing could rob the Red army of the glory of the victory of Stalingrad. The strivings, sacrifices, and sorrows of the peoples of the Soviet Union had not been in vain. Russia had risen to her greatest heights.

The Germans suffered a serious defeat, but it was not the defeat. As the Red army's lines of communications lengthened and the Germans' shortened, the enemy was able to make a comeback in the Donets Basin, notably recapturing Kharkov. More and terrible battles were ahead.

MANAGER ABOUT TOWN—W. Gustave Von Lowenfelt, new manager of the Roosevelt, who's also an authentic Austrian baron, keeps pinching himself to see whether he's in Washington or New York. He dropped into the Statler cocktail lounge, was warmly greeted by Bob Knight's crew who'll never forget playing for Mr. V. at the Cafe Pierre's opening and being rewarded with champagne. Stepping across the street to the Carlton's Club, Von Lowenfelt was greeted with a shout of "Hello, boss," from Maestro Harold Nagel who'd also played for him in New York. It goes to show that our town is getting Manhattanish. Mr. V.'s first Washington booking is Jack Jenny, top trombonist, rated with Tommy Dorsey and Jack Teagarden, who will bring his band to the Roosevelt's Victory Room next Tuesday.

Clarissa, saucy Latin dancer who's been appearing with the St. Louis Opera, opens at the Troika tonight. Held over again are those femme mirthquakes, the Duncan Sisters. Watch for a Troika surprise of surprises.

GAY AND RIDIC — That's Nancy Noland who'll be moving into the new Olmsted's club next Thursday. Nancy's going to rock genteel Washington on its shell-pink ear. She's britle, sophisticated, definitely New York—and loads of fun. She was even funny talking to us on long distance, which is rather a chore. And girls, attention! Nancy's bought three new Hattie Carnegie gowns for the Olmsted opening. Watch, too, for Nancy's costar, soignee Aileen Cook who sings ballads of infinite charm—and impropriety.

Lane and Small, musical comedy dancers in the Lotus' "International Revue"

The Starlight Roof closes tomorrow evening after its biggest season ever. This rainless summer kept the Starlight cash registers tinkling gaily. Myles Hallett and his band will move downstairs to the Cafe Caprice on Monday.

SYMPHONY SWINGSTERS are the key men of Eddy Rogers' band at Del Rio. Eddy himself was a start violin soloist with NBC. Other symphony men in the band include pianist, Max Gold, formerly of NBC; Trombonist Merrill Sherburne who had three years with our own National Symphony; tuba player, Earl Nelson; trumpeter, Michael Didyk, who played with the Polish Symphony.

Hildegarde, the marvelous, who's coming to the Statler next Wednesday, was once fired by Irving Berlin when she was one of his song-pluggers. He told her to get out of his office and go right on the stage.

THANKS A LOT—To Edgar Baum, partner in Crossroads and now a Marine (we can't tell by his signature whether he's a captain or corporal, but he ought to be a colonel) for sending the address of Singer-Marine Bunny Hare for a Marine admirer in the Pacific. Those Marines always get everything under control.

SIXTYISH YOUNGSTER. When you, dear readers, are in your sixties, let's hope you have the amazing good looks and vitality of silver-topped Leo, seer of Mayfair, who goes night clubbing at all hours. Leo was at the Treasure Island opening of Mario Hurtado's music, dancing like a debutante and all done up in a bright blue and gray sports jacket.

Hi Hat's Jack Neal is by way of being a musical magician. On request he'll play fast music on a piano keyboard covered with a bath towel while blindfolded and wearing gloves—and also name the key before he plays!

Court to Determine OPA Powers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 2.—A Federal court today set September 13 for hearing arguments on whether the Office of Price Administration can require witnesses to testify before an OPA examiner without benefit of counsel or court reporter of their own choosing.

In setting the date Judge John P. Barnes informed Robert B. Johnstone, OPA chief trial attorney, that the burden of proof would rest upon the OPA and added:

"You may be able to show me that witnesses are not entitled to attorneys but you are going to have a difficult time proving that a witness is not entitled to an independent court reporter when the OPA has its own reporter there."

Johnstone contended before Judge Barnes today that the OPA had such authority and termed proceedings before an examiner analagous to grand jury proceedings. This position was opposed by Attorney Edward J. Rothman, secretary and agent for the Empire Packing Co., meat wholesaler under investigation for possible violation of ceiling prices on beef sales.

Four Army Men Die in Crashes

Four Army men were killed in two plane crashes in Maryland and Virginia, Air Force officials reported yesterday.

Two men from the First Air Force Base at Camp Springs, Md., were killed instantly yesterday afternoon when their plane crashed in a field near Mechanicsville in Charles County, Md.

Officials at the base stated that the plane was of a light training type and was on a routine flight. No reason for the crash was given and names and rank of the men are withheld pending notification of the next of kin.

Two officers of an infantry division were killed Wednesday in the crash of a plane at Eubank's Corner in the A. P. Hill military reservation, the post announced yesterday.

They were identified at their division headquarters as Lieut. J. S. Williams, the pilot, of Amarillo, Tex., and Lieut. Robert W. Henning, observer, of Hartford, Conn. They were attached to a headquarters battery and were engaged in a training mission when their plane crashed and burned. Both were said to be single.

Gas Light Co. Opposes PUC Stand on Rates

Arguments based on postwar population changes in the District and the competition encountered from electric power, coal and oil were advanced by the Washington Gas Light Co., at hearings before the Public Utilities Commission, as reasons why the present allowed rate of return of 6.5 should not be reduced but increased.

E. J. Boothby vice president of the company, told the commissioners there would be little change in Washington's population after the war. He said temporary workers who would leave here after the war would be replaced by returning servicemen.

Postwar Predictions

He predicted there would be a large increase in home construction after the war which will result in added costs to the company for the installation of gas facilities. He said thousands of workers who will lose their wartime jobs will remain on here in other jobs and a great many of them, already dissatisfied with temporary housing, will construct permanent homes.

He said competition caused by electric, coal and oil distributors cut deeply into the company's revenue and gave this as one of his major reasons why the rate of return of 6.5 on the company's holdings should be increased instead of decreased to a possible 6 per cent, which has been indicated as a possible move by the commission.

Present figures indicate for the rate year, which began yesterday, the public is entitled to a total reduction in gas rates amounting to $38,000. This figure represents the excess profits earned by the company during the "test" year which extended from July 1 to June 30.

6 Per Cent Return Cited

V. A. McElfresh, accountant for the PUC, testified the company could operate at a profit if the rate of return were lowered to 6 per cent. He based his opinion on the study of the operations of other utility firms and on the figures of the Washington Gas Light Co.

At the present time the Potomac Electric Power Co., which also operates under the sliding scale arrangement, works on the 6 per cent figure.

The hearing was adjourned at noon yesterday and will reconvene this morning at 10 a. m. E. Barrett Prettyman is representing the company and Attorney Lloyd Harrison the PUC.

Johnston Optimistic on Postwar Trade Outlook

There is a distinct difference in British and American philosophies of postwar world trade, but reconciliation of the philosophies isn't essential to successful postwar planning, Eric A. Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said yesterday after returning from a three-week tour of England.

"We put the emphasis of postwar planning on opportunity," Johnston said. "The British put the emphasis on security.

"They want the cartel system," he continued. "The British would like for us to join them in dividing the markets and so forth. I don't believe it will work, and I told them so."

Sees Need for Planning

Johnston said his trip had made him realize the necessity of postwar planning "among countries bordering the Atlantic" as never before.

"And we ought to start now," he said. "We made a great mistake after the last war. After we're started we ought to work with Russia."

Johnston said he was especially impressed by tremendous British production. Eight million English women are working in war industries alone, and Britain is learning the art of mass production from America, he said.

3 Decisions to Make

America, Johnston said, has three decisions to make before postwar planning can be put into effect.

1. Are we going to live alone and like it?
2. If not, who are we going to live with?
3. What will be our means of implementing the people we live with?

"The British," Johnston said, 'are somewhat worried about South America. "They are afraid that some of their contacts there have been taken over by the United States, and that they won't be able to get the contacts back after the war.

"I told them that the United States hadn't been able to ship to South America either. I think the contacts should go back to Britain after the war. Goods with the British label will be more popular in South America after the war than ever before, I believe."

Johnston said he proposed to the British that there be a "marrying" of British and American capital all over the world after the war.

"I think there will be much greater trade than ever before," he said, "and the best thing for British trade will be a high level of purchasing power in the United States," he said.

Rise Noted in Oil Shipments to East

A slight increase in deliveries of petroleum products to the East Coast was reported by the Petroleum Administration for War yesterday, but the gasoline picture was said to be still bad with local shortages prevalent.

Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes said that there was a record breaking shipment of 1,634,514 barrels of petroleum products a day during the week ending Angust 28. This brought the index of stocks available to civilians up 2.3 points to 39.1 per cent of normal.

A year ago during the same period, Ickes pointed out, the stocks were 58.7 per cent of normal.

Pointing out that the increases were largely of crude and fuel oil, Ickes said, "Remember that the winter months are fast approaching and take comfort in the knowledge that petroleum operations are being managed so as to insure against the East Coast going cold for want of heating oil when warmth is an essential to health and life itself."

In another petroleum development, the Petroleum Industry War Council adopted a strongly worded resolution stating that there has been "inexcusable delay" in increasing price ceilings on crude oil and petroleum products.

The council recalled that it had recommended higher ceilings "long ago."

Ickes took up the cause of petroleum producers, but was turned down by Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown who said he felt an increase in price ceilings was unwarranted. The matter was then brought before Fred M. Vinson, director of Economic Stabilization, who has not yet made a decision.

Wanted by Fleischmann!
Good Judges of Good Whiskey To Try a Great New Brand!

TASTE! BODY! AROMA! These are the three qualities of a superb whiskey—and in Fleischmann's PREFERRED you find all three! The taste is rich, delicious! The body round, and full! The aroma, delicate!

Wouldn't You Like to Serve a Whiskey that has the Full, Ripe Richness of the World's Finest, Most Limited Brands? If you would, now you can! Read why!

This invitation is written for the few men who are really good judges of good whiskey . . . who can appreciate a whiskey that is as gloriously rich, creamy and delicious as the world's finest, most limited brands—and who do not need a high price to confirm them in their judgment.

We set out several years ago to see if we could make such a whiskey. We spared no expense. We experimented. We drew from the world's choicest reserves. We selected the finest grains, and backed them up with the world's most delicate skill.

The result is—Fleischmann's PREFERRED, one of the world's most remarkable whiskies. Velvety! Creamy! Full! Delicious! We are sorry that we can offer Fleischmann's PREFERRED only in limited amounts as all our distilling facilities are devoted 100% to the war effort. If your dealer has Fleischmann's PREFERRED, try it! You'll always be glad you did!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST "MANHATTAN"? We say so! Take 1 dash of Angostura Bitters, ¼ oz. sweet vermouth, and 1¼ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED! Stir with ice, strain into 4-oz. glass, add one Maraschino cherry!

FOR AN "OLD FASHIONED" that tastes like cream—to ½ level teaspoon granulated sugar, 2 or 3 dashes of bitters in an Old Fashioned glass, add just enough water to dissolve sugar. Muddle! Add ice cubes, 1¼ oz. of Fleischmann's PREFERRED. Garnish with cherry, twisted lemon peel, or orange and pineapple!

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED BLENDED WHISKEY

FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED Blended Whiskey. The straight whiskies in this product are 4 years or more old; 35% straight whiskies, 65% neutral spirits distilled from grain. 90 Proof.

'Registers' with the College Crowd

Frosh, Soph, Junior or Senior . . . they all have their own theories but agree on the principle of the famous Manhattan label for college men. Manhattan's no hit-or-miss proposition . . . it's an old stand-by with them as in the days when their Dads were the stuff in school with their high, turtle neck sweaters. Manhattan is right at home with the men of Georgetown, Maryland, G. W., C. U. or American University. And preferred also by the men who work during the day and then attend classes at Columbus, National and other schols around town. No matter where you go . . . in town or out . . . be sure that Manhattan goes with you. It's a tried and true school companion.

Backward In Welfare

Apologies are necessary for every one of Washington's welfare institutions. That is the overshadowing fact which ought to guide officials in considering the budget requested by the Board of Public Welfare for the fiscal year 1945. The wartime emergency caught the city utterly unprepared to meet its obligations to approximately 5000 individuals in District welfare institutions. Now it is impossible to make up for the negligence of the past because of the shortage of manpower and building materials. Some deplorable conditions have been improved by increasing maintenance funds, but the larger problem of modernizing these institutions must await the return of peace.

In the meantime we should not forget the appalling social cost of the city's backwardness in this sphere. Take a glance, for example, at the District's training school for the feeble-minded at Laurel, Md. The school can house fewer than 600 children. So its waiting list—representing mentally defective children urgently in need of institutional care—is almost as long as the list of actual inmates. And for those favored by admittance the character of the care and training given has sadly deteriorated. The school is supposed to have 68 attendants, but actually has only 40 because vacancies can no longer be filled. The problem of the depleted staff is the more acute because the school has no buildings of the type needed to segregate defective delinquents from the more docile inmates who require less supervision. Perhaps the magnitude of this deficiency can best be illustrated by the fact that this school of fewer than 600 inmates reported 600 escapes in the last year.

While the training school at Laurel is now more desperately in need of relief than any other District welfare institution, it is by no means unique. Modern plants are needed also for the various industrial training schools, the Children's Receiving Home and the Home for the Aged and Infirm. The most hopeful aspect of the welfare budget is Welfare Director Huff's request for funds to begin immediate study and preparation of plans for the building of new institutions as soon as the war is over. It is unfortunate that Congress has allowed all of these necessary replacement projects to pile up at one time. But the fact that it has done so remains. The city is now confronted with an immense building program to move its welfare institutions (except the Receiving Home) outside of the congested area to more rural settings. It would be backward indeed if it did not press for adequate preparation now so that the work may go forward without delay or excuse in the early postwar period.

Postwar Reforms

In a survey intended to test the sentiment of the public on postwar reforms the American Institute of Public Opinion found 58 per cent of voters registering opposition. A similar inquiry in Great Britain produced quite opposite results, with 57 per cent of the replies favorable to postwar reforms. Does this mean that a large majority of Americans want to revert to conditions as they were prior to the outbreak of the war, while the British are looking forward to a new order of society? On the face of the inquiry it would seem so, as the American group was asked whether it would "like to see many changes or reforms made in the United States" or would prefer to have the country "remain pretty much the way it was before the war."

In our opinion it would be a grave misinterpretation of the public temper to assume that the answers to a general question of this sort connote satisfaction with things as they were before the war. A question relative to one's attitude toward reforms in general is not a reliable guide to what the average man thinks about specific reform proposals. Gallup surveys have previously demonstrated that the American public favors a good many policies designed to effect far-reaching political and economic changes in the postwar period. Even though the majority of Americans know little and seemingly care less about the National Resources Board report, in marked contrast to the interest in the Beveridge Report displayed by the British workers, they are on record as favoring an extension of the Social Security program. They also favor active participation by the United States in postwar world affairs and postwar membership in a League of Nations.

Second Front

Evidently not all the questions appearing on the Quebec agenda were answered by President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill in their recent conference in the old Canadian capital. What remains unsolved can only be guessed at. In all probability the two leaders of the world's democracy have not yet talked to a solution the problem of a west front on the continent of Europe. This problem is generally thought of as a problem in our relations with Russia. It is nothing of the sort. It is a problem in the military strategy of this war. In his Quebec speech Mr. Churchill seemed to put off the "second front," though his remarks were highly tentative, and left open the door to further consideration of the subject. Doubtless another attack on the when and how of a "second front" will be attempted at the White House.

In the nature of things the ways and means of establishing a "second front" and the timing of that front invite different points of view. The British are in a different position from ourselves. They once had a second front in France, and, as Mr. Churchill said, it was a fine front. But "it was torn to pieces by the concentrated might of Hitler." Mr. Churchill was not implying a "once bitten, twice shy" attitude. What he was doing was warning the world that the job of building up a front is a task of some magnitude, especially when we have so many other fronts to serve, not excluding Russia's own front.

Mr. Churchill's caution is not only the lesson of British experience. It is a reflection of his flair for the flank attack. Nobody, except perhaps the Pacific diehards in the Navy, today questions the wisdom of opening the North African Front. And the evidence is that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill saw eye to eye on that great adventure to restore the Mediterranean to Allied control. But Mr. Churchill's strategy doubtless went further, and envisaged a flank attack on Nazi Germany from the Balkans. Moreover, he is anxious to conserve British manpower. Twenty-five years ago the British lost a fair-sized generation in battering at the western citadel of the German army. It is no wonder that the British hesitate to risk another generation. "There will always be an England," they sing, but there might not be an England very long if there were another bloodletting of the same extent as occurred in the last war.

It seems strange to think of a man renowned all his life for his impetuosity as a prudent strategist and statesman. But "at the summit of the war direction," as the Quebec conference put it, this is how Mr. Churchill begins to look in the light of his speeches and his conduct. This is no reflection upon him. It makes him all the more valuable as a brake on the bolder mind of our own President, though that mind is better fitted for our ultimate military task. In this war Mr. Roosevelt is at his best in the realm of military strategy. It would have been folly for him to try to guide the day-by-day development of strategy, and this he does not seem to have done. But he appears to have been a necessary stimulus to the operating strategists in thinking always in terms of attack and the progressive maintenance of the military initiative.

Far be it from armchair strategists to pass judgment on the when and where of the "second front." Only the professionals have the facts upon which to be dogmatic. There is the problem of supply and diversion, that the nonexpert cannot take into account. Modern war requires three times the supplies required in the last war. In this war against Hitler our point of concentration, moreover, is the Mediterranean. Thus any decision to break into Festung Europa from the west would call for a mammoth job of diversion from the Mediterranean. Britain would have to be re-created as a base, and this, we should imagine, is the next task.

If it isn't the next task, our strategists will have failed to realize either the damage or the lesson of air power. Look at Hamburg. In three nights the RAF captured, sacked, and restored to the Germans the great port of Hamburg. When Germany itself has been Hamburged, as it will be, then we must see to it that it is not returned to the Germans. Air power must transfer possession to the other fighting services on the spot. The Russians, of course, know that this will happen, though they do not say so. They do not even acknowledge the aid which the air onslaught on Germany is giving their offensive on the Eastern Front. But let nobody think that they do not appreciate what has been and is being done in their behalf. The diversion from the Eastern Front of the main fighter strength of the Luftwaffe, the crippling of facilities of production and supply within German, the undermining of the German will even to resist, let alone to win—these are the results of our air offensive. The Russians are too realistic to minimize to themselves these results. If they were asked tomorrow whether they would choose—and there would have to be the choice—between a "second front," with its corollary of the air umbrella transferred over the heads of our Army instead of over German heads, and the maintenance of the air offensive, we feel the answer would be in favor of keeping our planes raining bombs on Germany.

Why, then, do they press their demand for a second front? In great part we believe the reason is propaganda to keep their own decisive service to the defeat of Hitler constantly in the foreground as a counter in their political strategy. Nevertheless their reminder is, as Mr. Churchill said, welcome, and it is underlined by the signs and portents of Denmark. This is, indeed, the "summit of the war direction," and, as Cromwell advised, we must therefore "look to the end," so that there will be no German as there was an Italian contretemps.

Peace Plea

The content of Pope Pius' latest address is much less startling than the occasion of it. There is scarcely any news at this date in the discovery that the Pontiff is in favor of a just and magnanimous peace. The important question is why he chose the fourth anniversary of the war to make a special and unannounced appeal for an early end to the violence and destruction which have so long shaken Europe and the world. Obviously it was because he judged that the moment was opportune, but on what basis, or with what understandings, if any, with temporal leaders, it is impossible to guess.

It is perhaps significant, though, that the Pontiff passed over the pronouncements of the rulers on both sides to speak in the name of the peoples. The peoples, he said, are sick beyond endurance with a total warfare that has brought them only misery, sorrow, hunger and ruin. They clamor more and more vociferously for peace, for bread and for work. It was at about this point that the Pope uttered a phrase that seemed to come close to an anathema. "Woe," he said, "to those who build their power on oppression, on torture of the innocents, on injustice, and on those who interfere with the building of a just and lasting peace." The reference, however, is as obscure as the imprecation is eloquent. He may have meant exclusively the Nazi rulers who have wrought such sufferings in the occupied countries or he might have meant those leaders of both sides indiscriminately who give the primary orders for forms of warfare in which the principal sufferers are noncombatants.

There is, however, scarcely any mistaking whom he had in mind when he said that he was addressing himself "to those who can bring justice to all." He reminded them that "the truly strong need not fear being too generous." Here, almost certainly, he was speaking to the peoples of the United Nations and particularly to those of the United States and Great Britain. But whether he was here pleading for a special magnanimity toward Italy, as well as for the general principle of magnanimity, it is impossible to say. Nor is there any way to determine whether the Pontiff's words were intended to support some approaches in the direction of peace that the present Italian government may have made or may be about to make.

Primarily, however, the Pope must have been speaking to as well as for the peoples of Europe. He seemed almost to be offering as well as demanding a hope that the end of the year will bring the beginning of "a new era of reconstruction." Possibly he believes that only such a prospect can preserve Europe from utter collapse into anarchy. Nor can there be much doubt that the Pope's words will find response among war-sick peoples everywhere. Students of history will no doubt note with interest how closely the Pope's formula of "peace, bread, work" parallels the formula "peace, bread, land" of Lenin in the Russia of 1917.

Merely by repeating the words which expressed the desire in every heart, Lenin was able almost single-handedly to overturn the Karensky regime and to accomplish that fateful October revolution which was to bring the Russians neither peace nor bread nor land. That the Pope is not to be accused of Lenin's revolutionary cynicism does not mean that his appeal will be on that account any the less effective. It is difficult for us in this country who have as yet but barely felt the scourges of war to realize that the Pope was uttering the now inarticulate thought of many millions. Now perhaps is the time to define what we mean by "unconditional surrender."

Democratic Victory

The seat in the House left vacant by the death of Representative Englebright of California has been won by a Democrat. Since Mr. Englebright had been in Congress 16 years, coming from a strongly Republican district, the Democrats are understandably jubilant over their victory. However, the interpretation put upon the outcome of the special election by the chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee, Representative Drewry, is utterly fanciful. "This first test of party strength," the Drewry statement says, "indicates very strongly that the voters have rendered a verdict of approval upon the conduct of the Government and of the war under present leadership." Since the Democratic candidate received only 11,000 votes against a total of nearly 16,800 votes cast for two Republican contestants, this claim is absurd. However, the Democrats may well take comfort from the fact that disunity in the Republican ranks enabled them to take a seat in the House away from a dominant Republican voting majority. That is the kind of defeat that Republicans ought to brood about.

Complex Problem

By Mark Sullivan

Russian Negotiations

THIS COLUMN aims to make a small number of elementary points which it is desirable the public should bear in mind, about a delicate and serious situation.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, now together in Washington, are approaching negotiations with Premier Stalin of Russia. The purpose is to arrive at agreement about an extremely wide and complex group of intricately related matters—including conduct of the war from now on, policy about Germany when the war ends, and about postwar arrangements for world peace. That the negotiations should succeed is vitally desirable.

There is every reason to have confidence that Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill will conduct the negotiations with skill and wisdom, including consideration for Russia. There is proof, among other evidences, in the extraordinarily able speech of Mr. Churchill this week. That Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill should have the confidence of their countries is essential to success. If in their conclusions there is anything unacceptable to America, the country has a check, for any conclusions involving international agreement must be laid before the Senate for ratification.

THE DIFFERENCES necessary to be bridged are many and deep. A few are:

Russia wishes to hold onto three small countries along her border which she seized in 1939-1940—Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania. Russia says she needs these countries for safety against attack. The United States regards these countries as independent, and recognizes exiled governments representing them. The possibility of compromise here lies in arriving at a program for international peace satisfactory to Russia, so that she would feel safe in permitting these countries to be independent.

The United States and Britain are waging war against both Germany and Japan (with Italy and other Axis satellites). Russia is fighting only against Germany—with Japan she has a pact of nonaggression. This bears on the problem of the United States and Britain setting up a second front in Europe. They are obliged to use some of their forces against Japan, and to remember, that after Germany is defeated they will still have the task of defeating Japan.

There is a broad difference between the circumstances in which Britain went to war and those in which Russia became involved. Britain, although not attacked, went to war immediately after Hitler set out on his career of conquest in September, 1939, for the purpose of stopping Hitler. Russia did not go to war at that time—on the contrary, she had recently made a treaty of nonaggression with Hitler. Russia went to war only after and because Hitler, breaking his treaty with her, invaded her territory. This was after Britain had been fighting for a year and nine months.

THERE WAS a specific difference between Britain and Russia, at the time the war broke out, about Poland. Britain, as she went to war, announced that Poland must be saved. Russia, within two weeks after the war broke out, seized part of Poland. This condition figures in the present negotiations. Russia wishes to hold on to the part of Poland she seized. Britain is bound by her pledge to rescue Poland.

Britain and the United States have announced that the end of the war must be "unconditional surrender" by the Axis nations. Russia has never united in this position. Russia can, under certain conditions, make a separate peace with Germany. There is a treaty between Britain and Russia, covering the making of peace, but the exact terms of this treaty are not commonly understood. As Dorothy Thompson has pointed out, the Russian-British treaty pledges Russia merely not to make peace with "a Hitlerite government or any government of Germany that does not clearly renounce all aggressive intentions." Apparently Russia could make a treaty with the German people, or representatives of them, other than Hitler.

Between the United States and Britain, and on the other hand Russia, there is a deep chasm of ideology. The United States and Britain practice parliamentary government, freedom of speech and press, freedom of religious worship and teaching, the right of individuals to own property and conduct businesses. All this the Russian government denies. This difference becomes important as respects whatever government is to be set up in Germany after the war. Presumably the United States and Britain would wish a form of government having their characteristics; presumably Russia would prefer a form of government having its characteristics.

Obviously the negotiations are difficult. Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill deserve, within proper limits, immunity from some kinds of criticism.

Denmark, Bulgaria

By Paul Schubert

Where There's Smoke . . . .

PERHAPS IT'S more than a coincidence that Denmark and Bulgaria have bubbled and boiled, recently, with the steam of national resentment pressing upward against the lid of German domination.

Other European countries have just as much cause to hate their Nazi overlords. We hear of unrest in other European countries. Why did it happen that Denmark and Bulgaria reached the popping off point at about the same hour—ahead of other countries?

Perhaps the answer was political . . .

But perhaps we should look deeper. Perhaps the real underlying reason was military.

Denmark and Bulgaria are potential invasion points of the utmost importance. During these late summer days of 1943, as the war's fateful fourth birthday rolls around, the Germans are on the defensive—looking everywhere for weak spots in the walls of Fortress Europe, trying to plug those weak spots before it is too late. Allied power is rising. All the world knows that we intend to assault Fortress Europe, force our way in. Germany may profess outward calm, but the Germans are just now in the grip of deep, black fear.

SUPPOSE THE German command had decided, rightly or wrongly, that the Allied plan of invasion had chosen Denmark and Bulgaria as points of entry?

Fear, in the German, is automatically translated to harshness and violence. If the Germans did decide that Denmark and Bulgaria were gaping holes in the Nazi defense structure, the first solution to which the German mind would turn, would be to force Danes and Bulgarians to plug those holes. Pressure would be put on the Danish and Bulgarian governments, to provide men, equipment and money for the "defense" of Denmark and Bulgaria.

It is beyond German understanding to comprehend why Danes and Bulgarians should resist such pressure—why Danes and Bulgarians should choose, rather, to oppose their German overlords . . . why, in the case of the Danes, this should lead to open revolt which must be followed by martial law, large scale executions and imprisonment . . . why the Danes should "ruin" their "good" relations with the Nazi occupation forces. To the Germans such behavior is "illogical."

German inability to comprehend the logic of the impulse to be free, has been responsible for a good part of the world's woes during our lifetime.

DENMARK AND Bulgaria are both agricultural states. Both have considerable sympathy for countries with which Germany is at war. Tidy, thickly populated Denmark has built a comfortable economic position upon dairy products. During normal times Denmark sells butter and eggs, ham and bacon and cheese to the British Isles, and has the sympathetic attitude toward England felt by any shrewd merchant for a steady customer. The Danes sell to Germany, too—but the Germans pinch pennies and drive harder bargains. And beyond that there's hard feeling of long standing between Danes and Germans, over the question of boundary land and frontier populations. As for the German attitude, the individual German (not being particularly "Nordic" himself, thanks to French, Roman, Latin, Celtic, Baltic and Slav intermix) tends to admire the Nordic Dane as an individual, but to despise all Danes politically for the mass fault of having been born into a "weak" state.

In spite of their sympathy for England, the Danes accepted the inevitable when Germany invaded Denmark. The Germans granted them the fiction of "independence" under German occupation. Now all fictions have vanished. The Germans have made another mortal enemy.

Perhaps they felt that they had no choice. Perhaps the Germans felt forced to plug the Danish invasion gap, whatever the cost.

In the case of Bulgaria, that country's people sympathize with Russia, though fate has allied them to Germany for the second time in a generation, in war against the Russians.

Bulgarians are noted gardeners. They range far through Europe in normal times, growing garden truck on bits of rented soil, peddling it in small markets, competing in price and quality with local vegetable dealers (which is no small feat).

Bulgarians are Balkan people, swarthy and passionate—the opposite extreme from the "Nordic" type so admired by the Germans. Toward Bulgarians the Germans feel a lofty superiority . . . Bulgarians may be admitted to Axis alliance, may spill their blood for Hitler's cause, but they are not the equal of the German.

And if there is an invasion gap in Bulgaria——

Plug it. With Bulgarian corpses if need be.

Military Vs. Judiciary

The conflict has arisen between General Richardson and Judge Metzger as to whether the military or the judicial department of the Government has paramount authority in writs of habeas corpus cases in Hawaii. Both sides can quote the Supreme Court of the United States in their favor.

In 1849 in a majority decision handed down by Chief Justice Taney, in the case of Luther v. Borden, 7 How. 1, 12 L. Ed. 581, where the military and civilian authorities were in conflict concerning paramount jurisdiction over the Bill of Rights as to an action of trespass for breaking into a citizen's house in Rhode Island, the Chief Justice said: "If the government of Rhode Island deemed the armed opposition so formidable and so ramified throughout the State as to require the use of its military force and the declaration of martial law, we see no ground upon which this court can question its authority. It was a state of war, and the established government resorted to the rights and usages of war to maintain itself and to overcome the unlawful opposition. And in that state of things the officers engaged in its military service might lawfully arrest anyone who, from the information before them they had reasonable grounds to believe was engaged in the insurrection; and might order a house to be forcibly entered and searched . . . Without the power to do this, martial law and the military array of the government would be a mere parade, and rather encourage attack than repel it."

On the other hand, the Supreme Court during the Civil War, in the case of Ex Parte Milligan in 4 Wallace, pages 1-142, handed down the following decision:

"The Constitution of the United States is a law for rulers and people, equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men, at all times, and under all circumstances. No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented by the wit of man than that any of its provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of Government. Such a doctrine leads directly to anarchy or despotism, but the theory of necessity on which it is based is false; for the Government, within the Constitution, has all the powers granted to it which are necessary to preserve its existence."

It may be necessary for the Supreme Court to clarify this perplexing question, as no doubt it will arise in the occupied countries as it did in Hawaii. Joint sovereignty or jurisdiction has its perplexities, and some central authority must untie the Gordian knot.

CHARLES S. LONGACRE.

Litvinoff's Return

In regard to the return of Litvinoff to Moscow, we might review our own choice in selection of an Ambassador to the Soviet Union. Admiral Stanley, whatever his merits, was not known as an international diplomat. In fact he wasn't even known.

If we really want to cooperate with Russia we should send an Ambassador of national importance such as Sumner Welles.

While some sources keep repeating stories of Soviet reluctance to cooperate—it is evident that it is we who have been reluctant. The two most important Russian diplomats—Molotov and Litvinoff—have been to Washington. Molotov, we remember, was promised a second front in 1942.

If we would treat Russia as a first class ally and fulfill our promises we would establish unity and speed victory through real coalition warfare. HARRY CLARK.
Washington, Aug. 27.

Patriotic Duty

The editorial, "Family Life," merits special commendation. That editorial discusses the recent case of a woman who "made the sacrifice" of surrendering custody of her 6-year-old son so that she might join the WACS. Too long, and in too many ways, "patriotism" has been given as a reason for shirking basic and essential responsibilities in favor of more spectacular occupations.

I trust you will not misunderstand me. Women in military service and industry are doing an inspiring job in this country and abroad. Your editorial is singularly sound, however, in the contention that many women have wrongfully harbored the fanciful notion that "filling shell casings or welding jeeps is somehow a much nobler occupation for a modern mother than rearing her children." J. F. VICTORY.
Washington, Aug. 31.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey on Tomato Harvesting

Dear Harriet:

Lest you get the wrong idea about a new detail I just got harvesting and canning tomatoes I am just writing this note. I know how at first thought it seems funny to think of a jeep who joined up for a global war being in the tomato business, but it is important work, Harriet. When I and a lot of others got orders to help pick tomatoes I did not like the idea of being a Tomato Zouave. I told Sergent Mooney there was nothing about tomatoes in my draft papers and that my number was drawn from a fishbowl not from no tomato can.

Sergent Mooney says "Shut up, dogface, and do what you is told. You are lucky to get tomatoes. It could be watermellons!" I says to him, "Lissen, sarge, I joined up to be a hero and I never seen no hero with tomato sauce on him." He tells me "You are going to see one now, my boy."

Well, I am very firm with him and I tells him I was drafted to do a lot of things but that none of them had anything to do with ketchup. I tells him I took a oath to fight for four freedoms none of which has got to be picked off of a vine or pressed into a tin can. Also I explains to him that the Atlantic Charter was not drawn up in no tomato patch.

Even when I am arguing that my contract makes no menshun of any work among vegetables outside of a clause where I am serposed to get a couple of cabbageheads named Hitler an' Tojo, he just slips me a sunbonnet and a pair of overalls and tells me that while it wood be bad enuff for a jeep to be took up on charges of mutiny in the face of the enemy it wood be worser to be charged with mutiny in the face of a tomato. I ask him why nothing was said about tomatoes at the Quebec conference and he tells me a lot was said about it and the reason I didn't get it was on account of it was in that part of the President's speech which he spoke in French and I do not know the French word for tomato.

Well, anyhow, here I am picking tomatoes and helping out in a cannery and now I understand what a important duty it is and I am not soar, no more. Food is important to win the war and tomatoes has a lot of food value and unless we pick them they rot.

I am kind of proud on accoun of I am one of the fastest tomato pickers in my outfit. (I get a average of 97 which is very high. All the boys say I must of had experience and they don't believe me when I say I never picked one before in my life an' always had a idea they grew on trees. The sarge has thrun out a claim that I am a pro.

Well enyhow, in a war like this we should all do what we get told to do and wherever I can help is okay so long as the sarge don't put me on no detail to pick prickly pears. I send you all my love, my darling Harriet. OSCAR.

That New Tax Blank

From Ten-Forty E-S . . . .
It asks you to give a good guess
On just how much dough
You will get as you go—
If you do not encounter distress!

You don't know how much you will clear
'Twixt now and the first of next year,
But the tax you must know
Or 'twill fill you with woe,
So just guess as you go, that's a dear!

The contention against Jockey Merritt is that he didn't persevere with a horse, and the race tracks are now echoing with gags about perseverance. We heard a fan, leaning on the fence, yell at a horse, "Hey, persevere, will ya?"

Then there was the tout who got a hotdog which he didn't think was done enough and barked: "Take this back and persevere with it, fellah."

Queen Alice, famous New York Zoo elephant, is dead. Bought from a Coney Island sideshow 41 years ago, and then known (as all Coney's elephants are obviously known) as Luna, she has become known to millions of New Yorkers. Alice wasn't far over 50. We always thought elephants lived to be at least 100. She began to sag a few weeks ago, and finally had to be put out of her misery. Life in a New York zoo must do something to pachyderms. The strain of being stared at for four decades, the ordeal of having to look at those funny faces of human beings for nearly a half century . . . it must be pretty awful.

We have always thought any park animal should have at least two days a week with the curtains drawn and a sign "Do Not Disturb" on the cage.

Mr. Welles

Only an old gentleman heavily burdened and bemused by his many years would believe the American public so stupid as to take seriously the denunciations indulged in by Secretary Hull at his August 26 news conference, in the face of the unexplained and apparently unexplainable ousting of Mr. Sumner Welles from his post.

The Need For Moral Fervor In Wartime

By Agnes E. Meyer

(Excerpts from a speech by Mrs. Eugene Meyer at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, yesterday.)

The essential difference in the way the war effort is organized in Great Britain and the United States lies in the fact that the British are using necessity to conquer their social weaknesses, whereas our endeavor to achieve a maximum production has gone forward with a brutal disregard of the human beings involved, and with consequent intensification of all of our social problems.

The fact that the British at the outset of the war were constantly exposed to the possibility of destruction and death, unless they learned to defend themselves, played a great role in the development of their organization for total war. Partly owing to this emphasis upon the importance of voluntary self-defense, and partly because the British statesmen have a longer training in democratic administration, the war effort there has an emphasis wholly different from ours. In Britain the whole weight of the war rests upon the people. Here it is carried on by the Government. There the power of government is used as a mere tool to make the people more effective, to conserve their energies, as well as every ounce of material resources. Here the Government, instead of throwing responsibility out upon the States and the local communities, has concentrated more and more power in Washington, to a point where our human energies are being dissipated by one set of bureaucrats while our material resources are being wasted by others.

Home Front

The greatest shock to anyone returning from what is practically the battle-front to this country is the difference in the tempo in life of the people as a whole. For of what war means, we civilians have not as yet learned even the first lessons. It means that the home front is not merely an aid and encouragement to the army in the field, but the foundation upon which the whole weight of the war rests. It means that every man, woman and child is as much of a soldier as the man in the front line trenches. It means that human life and human effort are directed toward a single aim—victory.

The British nation is much more severely regimented than we are but as one British cabinet officer put it to me: "We use persuasion and voluntary cooperation to attain our ends, and keep sanctions in the background as a last resort."

In spite of the inevitable increase of central authority, the British government has decentralized the administration of the war measures through 12 regional jurisdictions. Every one of these 12 regions is practically an independent entity, fully staffed to carry on the war by itself even if London were bombed out of existence tomorrow. Each one has a regional director who works in partnership with local officials. Together they have encouraged the full participation in the war effort of all practical experience and talents, of individual initiative and of all voluntary welfare groups.

As I studied the British administrative set-up, one very important point was brought home to me. Administration is the most important function of government in total war, for there is no choice as to policies. Central controls identical with those of the enemy are forced upon the democracies in this conflict and the only difference that can exist from the Nazi regime is confined to the means by which they are put into effect.

Genuinely Democratic

The greatest inspiration in my journey through Great Britain was this discovery that a genuinely democratic people, even under the most unfavorable circumstances, can work out a new balance between state regulation, local government and voluntary action. The decentralized British war effort, in spite of the powers which the government possesses, is managed on this persuasive and reasonable basis. Obviously, a wholly different and esentially democratic psychology is produced when the authority of the government is not exercised but kept in reserve, and cooperation in behalf of a single all-absorbing purpose is emphasized. In that country the very institutions upon which the state is founded are used as the strongest weapons of attack. As a result their war effort is much more integrated than ours and has an impetus that comes only when a whole people is voluntarily united in behalf of a common cause.

Let me give you practical and definite comparisons to illustrate the difference in attitude between the British administration of the war effort and ours. I shall select the Manpower Act to show the importance of their democratic cooperation between government, industry and the people in total war, because that is now one of our major problems. Its basis in Great Britain is a system of industrial relations as cooperative and rational as ours are combative and emotional.

Let us quote Mr. Bevin's report on the work of the Ministry of Labor so that you may compare its tone with the atmosphere of our labor relations. He says: "It was decided to use the existing machinery of Industrial Relations and rely on collective bargaining, but supplemented by arbitration in place of strikes. Now, if you had imposed an Arbitration Act on the people, it might have been resisted. Therefore, we carried all these things through virtually by consent. In other words, the Arbitration Order really was legalized by a collective agreement entered into by the Trades Unions, the Federation of Employers, and the state. A good many people advocated a rigid state system of regulation. I am convinced that it would break down if you tried." Mr. Bevin's persuasive methods and his refusal to use force were justified by an almost complete absence of strikes.

Control of Manpower

Yet this minister has absolute control of all manpower. How is such an extreme control of industry and labor achieved without friction? First, because the people feel that the act is equitable both to the employer and the employe. Secondly, because it is so efficiently administered that the working man or woman is convinced that he or she is making his maximum contribution to national safety.

Mr. Bevin, Minister of Labor, has charge of all three branches of service and decides whether a man or woman can do the most good in the army, in the factory or on the farm. And they stay where they are put until further orders. What is more, they work around the clock, all of them, for at night they have air-raid practice and once every two weeks they stay up all night as fire watchers, but report the next day at the factory. The average work week is 56 hours for men and women. Of course, they have a manpower shortage, too. But they get the most out of what they have. Such complete regimentation is possible in a democracy only when the government has the confidence of its people.

Of this wise and firm administration of manpower, there have resulted the most interesting by-products. Because Great Britain is obliged to wring a maximum result from its men and women workers, it has surrounded them with elaborate social provisions to conserve their energies.

Needs Recognized

Every transferred worker is considered the responsibility of his government and of the community to which he is transferred. They are treated not like numbers in the production ranks, but like human beings with human needs that must be recognized. The war ministries and the local officials work together to furnish these transferred men and women with homes, with clubhouses and with the recreational facilities of every sort. When new housing is inadequate, they are billeted in private houses. As a result of this broad social program, the worker has gained a new vision of what democracy can do for the protection of the individual when it sets out not to repress, but to liberate the capacities of human nature. That this release of human energies would sweep the country's social thinking forward with unprecedented acceleration, may or may not have been foreseen. In any case it has happened and has created a veritable passion for the realization of social change and genuine equality.

What are the results of the arbitrary decrees which are shot at our working population by the President and Mr. Paul McNutt like so many thunderbolts? The local employers, labor union leaders and representatives of the Manpower Commission are doing their best to carry out Washington's decrees, but for lack of a National Service Act, they have no real power and find themselves helpless to cope with the confused situation.

The uncontrolled competition between the armed forces, industry and agriculture has put everybody in a false position that results in waste. Men with irreplaceable skills are taken from industry by the draft, farmer boys and miners whose work is essential, were allowed to volunteer, while the poorest kind of illiterates are working in shipyards and factories for wages far beyond any service they are able to render. If these migrants do not feel like working they remain at home, or if they don't like the wages in one job, they go to another, slowing up production through absenteeism, dissipating the national resources through a high turnover.

Families Live in Tents

This unrest among a large part of the population has as bad an effect upon the individual as upon the war effort. Many of these people live with their families in trailers, or in tents, and refuse to settle down in the housing which the Government has constructed for them, because they do not wish to tie themselves down to a particular job and community. When I asked one man who was earning a big salary and living in a filthy tent with half a dozen children, why he didn't spend $20 a month for rent of a nice Government house, he waved his arm around his temporary abode and declared: "What's good enough for the boys in Africa is good enough for me."

These trailer-minded vagrants are symptomatic of one of our most prevalent weaknesses, they desire to profit by the advantages of society without becoming a part of that society, the desire for complete freedom from any of the moral limitations and responsibilities which civilization imposes upon the individual.

But for vast numbers of war workers bad housing is not a matter of choice, and it is mainly due to substandard living conditions that we are losing thousands of men, and especially women, at a moment when Mr. McNutt is calling for two million more workers. They flocked to cities that already had a housing shortage before the war began, or to small towns suddenly overwhelmed by the need to supply accommodations for some new war industry that has been placed there by Government decree. The Federal Public Housing Authority, located in Washington, has tried to cope with this nationwide problem to the best of its ability, but it, too, has been hampered by legal restrictions and by an utter inability to keep in contact with local needs.

The overcrowding in many of our cities is so appalling that no war worker can be blamed for escaping from such inhuman living conditions. Hot beds which are occupied around the clock are still a commonplace. Often the native residents look upon "those dreadful war workers," as they only too often call them, as an unjust affliction, and treat them accordingly, instead of helping to adjust the strangers to the new environment and the new job.

No Stabilizing Influence

At present vast numbers of our war workers, far from home, friendless and lonely, are bereft of any genuinely stabilizing influence. They have lost their roots if they ever had any. They are too disoriented and too confused by the general insecurity of life to find a new equilibrium. Too often they live like cattle and have no recreation except the overcrowded movie. Even those who are lucky enough to get a home in the new housing projects find normal community living impossbile in the vast acreage of bare and completely similar dwellings. Many of them who have just come off relief can scarcely believe that they have a job. They don't care how long the war lasts because they are haunted by the fear that the end of war means the end of employment and the return to the dole.

Is it to be wondered that thousands of patriotic workers return home disillusioned? Isn't it inevitable that such disorder should create tensions that explode in strikes, race riots and other forms of rebellion? It is largely artificial. Owing to bad housing conditions, transportation difficulties and maldistribution of food we waste about as much manpower as it takes to turn out the total of British production.

One of the best examples of Britain's democratic progress, of its genuine concern for individual welfare and of its administrative skill, is the just and efficient distribution of Britain's very limited food supply. Health and strength are indispensable to the successful prosecution of a war whether in the battle-line, the production line or among the population as a whole. So Lord Woolton, the Minister of Food, began his work, not with the negative idea of "tightening belts," but with the positive aim of making the British people "fighting fit."

As a by-product of the blitz, when thousands of homeless, destitute and hungry people were roaming the streets, communal feeding was introduced. So-called British restaurants established and spread gradually all over the country, where a nourishing meal can be purchased at cost, not counting overhead. A meat and vegetable course costs 12 cents, soup and dessert each 5 cents extra. These meals can be obtained without ration cards and protect the low income group from the dangers of hunger and malnutrition. In addition every factory employing more than 250 workers is obliged by law to have a similar cafeteria. Workers in heavy industry also receive extra ration points. In Britain the diet of the worker is considered as important as that of the soldier.

Their first concern, Lord Woolton assured me, was for children, because in children we deal with the future of the Nation. Every child born since the war began is considered a special ward of the government. Milk is reserved for all those under 5 at 2 cents a pint or free if necessary, as well as orange juice and codliver oil. It has become axiomatic that every school child should receive one hot meal a day. As a result of this assurance to every child of a basic food supply, the health and well-being of the children of Great Britain has been raised as never before. All the resources of science have been put to work in a coordinated, orderly way on the extension of home production, on distribution and upon nutrition, and the whole food program has been integrated with war production.

Food Situation Here

What do we find when we examine the food situation over here? Would that I had time to picture it for you in all its portentous details. As soon as I reached the West Coast early in April and found the shipyard workers even then doing without meat and butter I reported to Washington: "Unless the OPA gets its tangles of directives straightened out, we are headed for something like a national catastrophe."

The chaos of the situation defies description. There is a ceiling on meat, but none on livestock, which leaves the retailer, the packer and the producer completely up in the air. Uncertainty over Government regulations has halted the operations of live-stock feeders. This has already cost the Nation 2 billion pounds of beef and will create the loss of 4 billion more pounds unless the juggling of processed foods is stopped and cattle start going to feeders at once.

The farmers are desperate because they lack manpower and farm machinery. They have planted only what they thought they could harvest so that we shall have too much of some crops and not enough of others. Lemons were rotting on the ground in California when I was there because there were not enough people to pick them, and tomatoes are now going to waste in the East. In spite of every kind of food shortage, the Government was not able to reverse its reduction program with despatch, and until now and perhaps even now we have still been paying farmers not to produce—"There is a growing recognition," said one California agricultural leader to me, "that we shall have to back down on some of our foreign commitments, because the food shortage in this country will become so acute this winter, that the Government simply will not be able to face the home situation."

In many of the war centers even this spring, I had to stand in line 20 minutes for a cup of breakfast coffee, and half an hour for lunch. I often went to bed without dinner because the poor food I could get wasn't worth the effort it took to get it.

What are we doing to protect the nutritional needs of the war-workers and the children in the face of these warnings? Not a thing.

So far the people are incredibly patient because they think a ration book is as good as a check on the bank. But ration books won't breed calves, and workers cannot produce munitions, planes and ships unless they get enough to eat. When I think that men and women who work from 8 to 10 or even more hours a day at hard labor in shipyards and mines, have the same meat ration as you and I, and usually do not get the 2 pounds a week to which they are entitled, it seems so absurd that I don't know whether to laugh or to cry.

And how about the children of these war-workers? What's happening to them? There, my friends, I touch upon a problem so menacing, so grave that I scarcely dare to burden your hearts and minds with a depiction of the stark facts. But I must tell you the truth, if I am to make with you the plea to which all this narrative leads us.

In the field of child welfare, I must again admit that Great Britain is doing a much more conscientious job than we are, in spite of the fact that their problem was intensified by the mass evacuations from bombed cities or vulnerable areas.

The future is black for many of these evacuated mothers and children for they will, in many cases, have no homes to return to when the war is over until the government can reconstruct the blitzed areas. But in the meantime they are being cared for to the last child. I saw them installed with their mothers in roomy Welsh chapels and welfed at a British restaurant next door. I saw them living comfortably in South Coast summer resorts, whose boarding houses make ideal hostels. I saw them billeted in private homes from one end of the country to the other.

The magnitude of the problem can be gauged from the fact that the Ministry of Health cares for 12,000 infants, whose parents are at work or dead, in 380 residential nurseries, many of them beautiful country houses taken over for this purpose. Older children are placed in boarding or camp schools where the novelty of a rural setting has enriched their lives in many ways. The board of education also supports the so-called youth organizations to fill the after-school hours with profitable leisure-time activities. In the matter of health protection in the school systems, Great Britain has always been ahead of us and they have now augmented this by insuring adequate nutrition for every child.

British Overhaul Education

What is perhaps even more remarkable, the British have found time in the midst of a desperate war to overhaul and democratize their whole educational system. Only 10 days ago Mr. R. A. Butler, president of the board of education, issued a statement that the school-leaving age would be raised from 14 to 15, with broadened opportunities for adult-education classes for all boys and girls who then go to work. Above all things, secondary education will henceforth be free to all who wish to continue their schooling, and the approach to the universities proportionately broadened. That in itself is a revolutionary step for a country where only a limited number of scholarships existed in secondary education.

To be sure, Great Britain has a high delinquency record and in some of the day nurseries and especially in the homes for delinquent children, the staff is not what it should be, owing to manpower shortage. But at least the British have faced their problems in child protection, sound provisions have been made for every age-group, and the reform of their whole educational system at such a time constitutes a veritable challenge to us to equal the vitality of their democratic thinking.

In the United States, under the impact of war, we seem to have forgotten what the maintenance of educational standards means to the future of our country. With the Nation safe from air attacks, we are allowing the public school system to be thoroughly blitzed throughout the land. Teachers are drafted by the Army, or they go into defense plants, tempted by salaries higher than the miserable pittance they receive for teaching; more than 100,000 teachers have left the public school system; any kind of substitute is perforce accepted in the place of these trained people and many of them will be permanently inflicted upon the various school systems.

In many war centers all pretense at thorough work has to be abandoned because the understaffed schools are so crowded that two and even three sessions are necessary. Innumerable children of war workers do not go to school at all. In one large Southern city which I visited, 2000 white and nobody knows how many colored children, roamed the streets, because there simply was no desk space to accommodate them. One of the movie theater managers said airily to the local truant officer: "Why not bring your teachers down here. My place is full of children day and night."

The pupils who can go to school are upset by the freedom of those who can't, and the absenteeism of the pupils at school was scarcely exceeded by that of their parents at the shipyards. You can get an idea of the demoralization from the fact that in one high school in this city, which has an enrollment of 3650 pupils, there were 8217 total absences in the month of March, and 1000 pupils were late. School gets to be rather tame anyway, when children from 12 to 13 upward can get wages higher than any heretofore earned by their fathers. In one West Coast city the mothers told me that everybody out of didies goes to work, and that discipline in the schools is easy because most of the pupils who bother to come at all, are asleep.

Delinquency Prevalent

Delinquency throughout the country is so prevalent and so varied that the police cannot cope with anything less than outright crime. Do not imagine that these crimes are restricted to the poor. Children of every income group are being neglected because their parents cannot resist the lure of bonanza wages. In fact, the parents in many cases are more reprehensible than the children, and simply don't want to be bothered with them. The local authorities also exhibit a sublime indifference until the crimes get so outrageous that they cannot be ignored.

In one city, things were allowed to go from bad to worse until three small boys, aged 11, 12 and 13, burglarized the Woolworth store and caused a fire which ruined the whole building and seriously damaged two adjacent stores. If you can stand more of these gruesome details, especially as regards the neglect of infants and elementary grade children, read the outline of some of my material published in this month's Reader's Digest.

I could pile horror upon horror for you if we had the time, but what is to me even more shocking than the behavior of these neglected youngsters and their misguided parents is the indifference of Washington in the face of this situation. The authorities in charge of the Lanham Act funds and FWA haven't the slightest idea of the local needs, and occasionally scatter nursery schools or other school buildings around the country much the way you would fire buckshot at a flock of crows. The permanent bureaus in charge of child welfare and education, the Federal Security Agency, the Children's Bureau and the Office of Education drew up an excellent bill called Senate Bill 1130, to meet the situation at every age level, on the soundest possible basis of Federal, State and local cooperation. The Senate, due to haste, passed it unanimously, but when this bill was presented to the House, the Budget Committee threw it out as rank extravagance, and the members of the Education Committee treated those of us who tried to appear in favor of it like a lot of suspicious people who were trying to loot the national treasury and destroy the independence of the public school system.

Many a time in the course of my sad pilgrimage through our great land my thoughts went back to the opening lines of Robinson Jeffers' poem—"Shine, Perishing Republic"—"This America settles in the mold of its vulgarity, heavily thickening to empire, and protest, only a bubble in the molten mass, pops and sighs out, and the mass hardens." The republic still shines in the vigor and productivity of sheer numbers, anxious to feed at the trough of an artificial prosperity. As one shipyard manager said to me: "The workers are only thinking of bettering themselves through the war. Nobody expects to make sacrifices. The labor union leaders tell me every day that the workers don't know we're at war."

Whose fault is it, I asked myself? It is the fault of an overcentralized government that neglects their welfare while demanding all they have to give, a government that leaves not only them but the entire nation devoid of inspiring leadership. We need a change of policy in the administration of the war, but we need even more a change of spirit.

It is a grievous error on the part of the President to confine himself to foreign affairs and the military conduct of the war. It has become axiomatic that the phychological aspect of total war is as important as any other. If proof were needed, it was given last week in the country's reaction to what Raymond Clapper called the "listless Quebec statement." The press rang with the general disappointment that nothing more electrifying had issued from that great galaxy of statesmen. We are fighting not merely to win the war but to win the peace. In the direction of moral fervor, in the art of inspiring a whole people to fight for a purpose that will live beyond victory and give permanence to the victory, the Declaration of Quebec offered us nothing.

High Cost of Living and Rationing Problems Found Chief Worry of Americans Today

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 2.—If you, the reader, could sit down and talk to your Congressman before he returns to Washington next week, what questions about the home front would you most want to ask him?

On the basis of a Nation-wide survey just completed by the Institute, the chances are that you would start asking him questions about one of six general subjects.

The general question in the survey was:

"If you could sit down and talk with the Congressman from your district before he returns to Washington, what questions would you like to ask him about problems here in the United States?"

WORRY NO. 1—HIGH COST OF LIVING

The chief worry at the moment seems to be the high cost of living. More questions are asked about that subject in the survey than any other. The constant refrain is "What is Congress going to do about the rise in living costs?"

The cost of food, in particular, seems to be uppermost. Here are some of the typical questions people would like to ask their Congressmen:

"What are you going to do about making food cheaper? . . . Will food prices be stabilized? . . . Why aren't price controls tightened up?

WORRY NO. 2—GASOLINE RATIONING

Next to the cost of living, problems connected with rationing produced the largest number of questions. These divide about equally between food rationing and gasoline rationing.

Here are some typical queries about gasoline rationing:

Can't you fellows get this gasoline situation settled? . . . Why does the West get more gas than the East? . . . Why has the handling of the gasoline situation been so muddled?

On food rationing: "When will the black markets be squeezed out? . . . Are we going to eat next winter? . . . Will there be enough food for us and for the conquered countries? . . . Where is the meat going?

WORRY NO. 3—POSTWAR PROBLEMS

The question asked by people in the survey reflect considerable public interest in postwar problems.

Chief worries seem to be over postwar employment, for civilians and for returning soldiers.

This is reflected in such questions as: "What is being done about jobs after the war? . . . Will the soldiers find work? . . . Can we prevent another depression after the war?"

There are also many questions asked about how the national debt will be paid off, whether taxes will remain as high as they are now, and how far the United States will go in cooperating with the rest of the world.

WORRY NO. 4—THE DRAFT

Next in importance, judging by the number of questions asked, is the subject of the draft, and particularly the issue of drafting fathers.

WORRY NO. 5—LABOR DISPUTES

Despite passage of the Connally-Smith Act, many questions reveal public irritation over strikes and labor disputes.

"When are we going to put a stop to strikes? . . . Can the law against strikes be made stronger?

WORRY NO. 6—GOVERNMENT BUREAUCRACY

Questions concerning Government bureaucracy and red tape rank sixth in order of frequency. Samples:

"Why does Washington put politics above everything else? . . . Why don't Government bureaus, like OPA, give us the straight facts? Too many conflicting theories . . .

AMERICA'S HOME FRONT

by

Agnes E. Meyer

Enthusiastically praised by "Time"—quoted by "Reader's Digest"—the 29 articles which Agnes E. Meyer wrote for The Washington Post on "America's Home Front" are a brilliant piece of reporting. Now these articles have been reprinted in a 192-page book. They deal with such subjects as social experiments in war industries, problems of food, sanitation, schools, and venereal disease control in boom cities. "America's Home Front" is well worth your reading and keeping.

'Hi Diddle Diddle' Makes For Frothy Fiddling

By Mary Harris

IF YOU CARE TO FIGURE BILLIE BURKE as Mother Goose, Martha Scott as a lovely dish who ran away to spoon, Adolphe Menjou as the gay dog who laughed—then you may wrastle some nursery rhyme significance into "Hi, Diddle, Diddle," now at the Capitol Theater. But you won't get any farther. It's all about a sailor's honeymoon that nearly didn't jell, combines elements of a treasure hunt, a bedroom comedy and suave crookery. Moving with the celerity of a comic strip, neatly bubbly, it had the early Thursday audience of youngsters shrieking with delight. Yours truly regarded the doings with a dyspeptic leer generally. But the picture can be catalogued among the pleasanter celluloid trivia of the departing summer.

The March of Time goes into high gear again with the saga of the jiving war plant of Sam Jack where there are no time clocks, but the 12-hour day reigns. There's a temperamental resemblance between Sam Jack in the M. O. T. and Sammy Kaye on the stage. They're both swingsters. Kaye says it with music and Sam Jack says it with airplane parts.

Totting up the Capitol show you'll find "Hi, Diddle, Diddle" as frothy as a glass of beer in a juke box parlor (and as lacking in authority), a March of Time that's a "must" item for any movie goer, and the stout, spirited and fine humored stage show that always comes off when Sammy Kaye and his band are in there batting. It's a good buy.

Vintage movie fans of the silent days will want to know how Pola Negri, one-time star of stars, does in her return to the screen, how the Negri map has stood up under the slow blitz of time. Pola looks ageless in her new reincarnation—but not the same, if you understand. Her eyes seem bigger and she's changed her former sharp, thin-lipped smile for a glowing grin that spreads all over her map a la Lupe Velez. Adrian has done better by her in clothes than any other woman in the cast and her role of opera singer gives her an opportunity to parade a spot of temperament—but not sensationally. It would be sweet of Hollywood to turn La Negri over to Director Ernst Lubitsch who created her in the first place. He might start Pola on a bona fide new career. Bouncing around in charades like "Hi, Diddle, Diddle" isn't going to add importantly to any movie parsonage's stature.

One unusual angle appears in the "Hi, Diddle, Diddle" story. The whole hocus-pocus is started over something that didn't happen at all. We'll let you guess what it is because this climax of finagling doesn't come until the picture's end.

Even the hard-hearted and hard-to-please movie goer will find a few completely ingratiating surprises in the show. One is when a scenic wallpaper depicting Wagner comes to outraged life and gallops off into nothingness as amateur choral singing of the "Pilgrim Chorus." And you'll love the sassy lass who pops up all over the picture in totally unrelated parts—as a bridesmaid, a typist, a taxi driver and flirts of both the Park Avenue and Fourth Avenue varieties. Billie Burke finally solves the mystery in an outraged whisper, "She's a great friend of the director's. He puts her in every scene where she can possibly be used."

Adolphe Menjou is the pap of Dennis O'Keefe, the father-in-law of Martha Scott, the husband of Pola Negri (whom we hasten to say is nobody's mamma). This persistence of the movies in making Menjou sits lightly, however, on his well-tailored shoulders. He's the sort of mature bucko who goes along, as they say, "with one foot in the grave and the other in the groove." He's also a sort of benign if unscrupulous deus ex machina, recouping Billie Burke's fortunes by gimmicking roulette tables and performing some remarkable financial acrobatics with mining stock that isn't worth its weight in feathers. Between times, he keeps an eye out for likely ankles, borrows money from doormen, tries to borrow money from wife Pola, is the best pal (but platonic) of night club singer June Havoc who's strictly his kind of people.

Between Menjou's very fat part and his unfailing ability, he's far and away the most important person in the show. Martha Scott is charming but she could do her sort of role standing on her pretty ear. Nothing much is demanded of Dennis O'Keefe except being a handsome husky. Which probably comes natural. June Havoc does a sleek chore. Billie Burke flutters as only Billie Burke can flutter.

Sammy Kaye's at his old and unbeatable stunt of picking bandleaders from the audience. Tops at yesterday's first show was a sailor boy from Maine with a sense of humor. If we're not mistaken he'll be right there in the finale.

All of the Kaye singing stars, the Kadets, Billy Williams, Nancy Norman, Tommy Ryan and Arthur Wright, are in top form, received quantities of applause. Kaye frequently had to cut off the demands for encores when they were at their height. After all, a show must run on a time schedule. Among the choicer items were Nancy Norman's "You'll Never Know," Billy Williams' "Paper Doll," Tommy Ryan's "Blue of the Evening" and an orchestral number of flower songs that wound up with the bandsmen waving fluorescent posies. As always, the laugh honors of the Kaye show go to Sammy himself and Cecil, the salty and sardonic drummer.

On the vaudeville side of the stage show are Sunny Rice, an exquisite little dancer who does a tap-ballet to "Eighteenth Century Drawing Room," and those gaudy comics, Ross Wyse, jr., and June Mann.

The March of Time's picturing of the Bill Jack factory is highly significant in any survey of industrial questions. It demonstrates clearly that American workers don't mind long hours and high pressure production—if they are coupled with their recognition as individuals, a genuine spirit of comradeship with the management, good pay. Sam Jack is certainly a smart businessman—but he is a master of psychology. He understands that workers like being put on their honor instead of punching time clocks like robots, that hot doughnuts and coffee give men and girls a big lift—and so does a friendly slap on the shoulder from the big boss.

Case of Stork Jitters

Head men of Twentieth-Century-Fox are coming down with a case of stork jitters. The way the studio's glamour gals have been increasing the population has the bosses jumping sideways and looking around for sedate character actresses to sign up. And here are the facts:

JOAN BENNETT

Betty Grable is about to join the ladies in retirement, with baby due in late spring; Alice Faye's toddler is keeping her away for several more months; Ditto Joan Bennett; Gene Tierney's heir is scheduled for pretty soon now and no pictures until next year; Cobina Wright, jr., a bright stellar prospect, also is expectin' and soon, and Maureen O'Hara is hoping like anything!

Comes now Gale Robbins, a new glamour gal just shoved into the Grable spot in "Something for the Boys," saying pouf pouf to stardom and thinking only of getting hitched to her Yale boy, Bob Olson. Darryl Zanuck and Joseph Schenck are in stitches. They remember the case of Brenda Marshall, who found herself thus and so in the midst of "Paris After Dark" soon after she was signed. Well, all I've got to say is that if the country looks to Hollywood to set it an example, we've done worse!

Wolf! Wolf!

Tip to city eds: If you knew the name of the prowling male star who can explain Florence Lundeen's "nervous breakdown," you'd have a hot story. . . . And maybe some soon-to-be-filed legal papers will provide a hint. . . .And who is the w. k. biographer who was called before the authorities and advised to pipe down his effort to keep a boy out of the service? . . . Frances Langford advises Jon Hall that in the topsy-turvey world of North Africa you don't take off your clothes to go to bed—you put 'em on—for protection against mosquitoes. . . . Wonder if David Selznick is waiting until Hitler's chased all the way to Hollywood before he makes "Mein Kampf"—in which case he might change it to "Mein Scrampf."

Not a Bite to Eat!

Joe McCrea raises 185,000 pounds of beef a year on his ranch, but he, Frances Dee and the family dine off ration cards even as you and I . . . And Bill Eythe, Twentieth's new star, is being loaded with fattening food at the studio's Cafe de Paris because his part in "Eve of St. Mark" calls for a well upholstered torso . . . Arthur Hornblow is ogling Orson Welles for the role of Nero in "Quo Vadis" but Orson's afraid he won't have time to learn to fiddle. Thought you were a magician Orson . . . And look for Laraine Day to play Lydia for Hornblow—if De Mille will let her off the set of "Dr. Wassell" long enough for tests.

Hair-Growing Derby

Five Warnerites have a new gambling gag. They're Humphrey Bogart, Philip Dorn, Helmut Dantine, Peter Lorre and George Tobias—all with shaved pates playing convicts escaped from Devil's Island in "Passage to Marseilles." Each week their new hair is measured with a micrometer, scaled to ten-thousandths of an inch and the winner cops a sizeable pool . . . Bob Hope sent Big Crosby a post card showing a wrecked and deserted African village. "Your picture, 'Holiday Inn,' is playing here," Bob scrawled, "doing a smashing business."

Glamour Girdle

Hear several majors are warm on the trail of 15-year-old Coleen Townsend, who was voted "Miss Los Angeles, 1953." The television workshop, where she toils at an acting career, is being besieged by studio talent scouts . . . Flora Robson, headed for Britain, postcards from New York that back there they knit like this: "Knit one, remember Pearl Harbor two," etc. etc. . . . The stories that got around about how Frank Sinatra has bought himself back from Tommy Dorsey and Dorsey's manager are all haywire. What happened was that the music corporation took over the Dorsey interest, and Frankie's right back where he started from. Sinatra, who did all right without singing lessons, is telling the bosses at RKO that he doesn't need acting lessons, either. Ho hum—I've heard that song before, too.

LEONARD LYONS

New Orleans Notes

(Leonard Lyons is on vacation. His guest columnist today is Roark Bradford, author of "John Henry" and "Adam and His Children," from which "The Green Pastures" was made; now a lieutenant in the U. S. Navy.)

New Orleans is in a rut! This leisurely, relaxed, old Southern city woke up the other morning to find herself right back where she was in 1862—overrun with Yankees!

"I thought we settled that business with the Hayes-Tilden sell-out in '71," grumbled the Oldest Inhabitant. "Ho-hum! You can't trust a Yankee. Tell Old Mammy Lou to bury the silver and tell Old Uncle Ned to hide the money in massa's tomb and wake me up if cotton goes to 20 cents a pound. War-schmar! And another thing, by Gad, suh! This Whirlaway you're talking about couldn't hold a candle for Lou Dillon to race by, and while we're on the subject of horseflesh, even the whisky is getting weaker!"

And while the O. I. is asleep let me say the younger generation finds the new crop of Yankees a pretty swell bunch: shipyard workers, soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen. At first they shudder at the idea of eating shrimp and crawfish, but they soon come around to Shrimps Arnaud and Crawfish Bisque Antoine. The restaurants advertise something they call "Northern coffee," especially brewed for those who are unaccustomed to a beverage that has to be chewed before swallowing.

Nor do we have to hide the silver. On the contrary. From information made public during a recent court wrangle between city and State police on jurisdictional matters in raiding gambling joints, it seems that some of our dice and spot cards have been off to college. While the courts ponder the situation we expect Gov. Sam Jones to advise the Yankee visitors to hide their silver!

Naturally, different viewpoints have led to a few clashes. But on only one occasion has a misunderstanding led to any permanent damage. This unhappy situation arose from an ancient and honorable controversy; whether a certain bar was longer than another, an argument that has been waged over mellowing drinks since the days of the French Occupation.

One of the bars is shaped like a horseshoe; the other is rectangular. Since 1764 it has been the custom of gentlemen to drink at the horseshoe bar, estimate its length and then repair to the rectangular bar, and over another drink discuss its length. This exercise in logic, reason and dialectics keeps up between the two bars as long as the debaters can say ipso facto.

In 1780 the eminent scientist, Leonard Euler, dealt the controversy an immedicable vulnus by proclaiming the solution might be reached by assuming that in small angles the arc was equal to the tangent, and following such mathematical operations, the curved bar could be transformed into a straight line and compared to the lines of the rectangular bar. For nearly a century calculus was hopelessly mixed with corn whiskey and it was tough going for the fine flower of our tipplers. Then, once more, Louisiana's hero, Gen. Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard, came to the rescue. It was right after the Hayes-Tilden trade when the good General, according to tradition, mounted the steps of the Custom House and demanded: "How small is a small angle?"

Thenceforth, the argument was resumed upon a reasonable alcoholic basis.

Until one day last week. A major of the United States Army Engineer Corps, with a diploma from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was being guided about the city by a local bon vivant. The question of the relative lengths of the two bars came up.

"That's no problem," said the luckless Yankee. "I'll determine which bar is the longer before you can say 'Ramos Gin Fizz!'"

Whereupon, the major set down his Sazerac and produced a steel measuring tape from his pocket. Naturally, his host had to shoot him. The coroner called it suicide.

In all oher respects, New Orleans is up to date. We are even getting a few good-neighbor-policy jokes through—current century vintage, too.

The latest one has to do with a meeting between Francisco Madero and Pancho Villa, seeking to impress the bandit with the responsibility of revolutionary leadership, pointed dramatically to the wall where hung an enormous map of Mexico. "That, Pancho, is your country," Madero said. "That is your Mexico!"

Pancho rubbed his unshaven chin for a few moments before he replied. "It looks beeger from a horse," Pancho said.

I can think of no better reply to give to this war's armchair strategists, changing only the last word to "Lockheed P-38."

Busy Newcomer

From the day she reached Hollywood as an unknown last February, Ella Raines has been almost constantly before movie cameras.

Teen-Agers Prance All Over Technicolor Screen at Palace

By Angele de T. Gingras

Teen-agers here, teen-agers there and teen-agers all over the technicolor screen! That's what started at Loew's Palace yesterday with "Best Foot Forward," a movie version of the Broadway musical hit by the same name.

If you like the singing, dancing and dating of teen-agers with some super-super studies in technicolor blue thrown in, we would suggest that you wait any length of line to get into the Palace.

But if your taste is toward the human animal at its more restrained ages we would suggest that you avoid like poison, Loew's theater at 13th and F.

"Life isn't all technicolor in Hollywood" sings Lucille Ball in the movie. A screen star, playing herself, she gets a mash note from a Woonsocki Military Academy cadet. He asks her to his graduation prom.

Her publicity agent decides it is a pretty good publicity stunt to accept the cadet's invitation. Against her better judgment, Lucille goes to the military academy.

Arriving at the Woonsocki railroad station our heroine is greeted not by a band but by one mangy puppy dog. The cadet who wrote her the mash note decided to keep her presence unknown because of best-girl complications.

At this point the fun really begins. Lucille is a cover-girl come alive. But the cadets' taste runs to the more immature. Despite their surface admiration they are convinced that the ravishing Lucille is a bit middle-aged.

There follow a variety of musical numbers featuring Harry James' Orchestra and especially keyed to the teen-age boogie-woogie temperament. All sorts of comedy situations are interwoven. There is a lot of dodging in and out of closet doors and a scene when the teen-age girls en masse proceed to take off most of Lucille Ball's clothes for prom souvenirs. One of the teen-agers, Nancy Walker, does a bang-up job as a girl who might have been labeled a wallflower because she just didn't have the "mug" to please anything much but walls.

The movie goes on and on through a succession of ensembles and choral numbers with Lucille Ball floating in and out. The military academy graduation is the finale with Lucille where she belongs, on the front page of the newspapers and in the special box with the majors watching the parade.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THE FULL STORY hasn't leaked out yet, but placid Donald Nelson and fiery Harold Ickes have been engaged in a hot word-battle behind the scenes over opening the national parks to the big lumber companies on the West Coast.

The issue goes deeper than merely one of conservation. It involves the fact that we are making wooden airplanes for Great Britain while Canada will not supply us with any of her sitka spruce. It also involves the amazing manner in which the big lumber companies have got their hands on the WPB's Lumber Division.

The argument pertains to sitka spruce for mosquito bombers. These bombers are doing a great job over Germany, and 45,000,000 feet of sitka spruce lumber is needed to produce them. Nelson says that only 34,000,000 feet are available in Oregon and Washington, so he wants Ickes to open the Olympic National Park to the big lumber companies.

Ickes, however, has refused. He says the lumber companies still have plenty of sitka spruce if they want to build roads to get to it and that they have been itching for years to sink their axes in the national parks. The war, he says, is just an excuse.

Even more important, Ickes points out that Canada has far more sitka spruce than the United States, but maintains an embargo on it, refusing to let it be shipped into this country.

"Canada is in this war too," Ickes has told Nelson, "and the mosquito bombers are being sent to the British. Let the Canadians remove their embargo and send us their sitka spruce."

Nelson has replied indignantly with a letter which states:

"The unavailability of national park timber for mosquito bombers will result in serious production losses and delays in getting on with the war. I hope you will give your approval to this and permit the Interior Department to cooperate with the War Production Board."

Big Lumber Lobby

However, here is one fact which Ickes so far has not mentioned to Don Nelson. Nelson may not know it, but a vigorous battle has raged inside his own Lumber Division regarding the use of sitka spruce for mosquito bombers. Charges have been made that this played into the hands of one big company—Weyerhaeuser.

Weyerhaeuser is the biggest lumber company on the West Coast and dominates the supply of sitka spruce. Strangely enough, a former employe of Weyerhaeuser, J. Philip Boyd, is now head of Donald Nelson's WPB Lumber Division.

When the question came up of making mosquito bombers out of sitka spruce, several lumber advisers inside the WPB, knowing it was not plentiful, recommended that Southern yellow poplar was as good or better. The scheduling unit at Dayton, Ohio, classified yellow poplar as equal to sitka spruce for "aero specifications," while W. D. Connor, former acting chief of WPB's Lumber Division, also recommended yellow poplar.

This brought an immediate protest from Boyd, whose former company, Weyerhaeuser, controls most of the rival lumber to yellow poplar. Boyd, then chairman of the lumber advisory committee, promptly wrote an opinion to the Army-Navy Munitions Board protesting the use of any wood except sitka spruce. His opinion was labeled by one WPB lumber expert, Nathaniel Dyke, as "misleading, biased and unfair."

It also brought forth a denial from Arthur Upson, then chief of the lumber division, who termed Boyd's letter "ill-timed" and "ill-advised."

Despite this, Boyd was later appointed by Nelson in Upson's place. Dyke, who opposed Boyd, was fired. Conner, who also opposed Boyd on sitka spruce, resigned and is now in charge of the Navy's lumber purchases.

And Boyd, who demanded that Mosquito bombers be made of the wood which his old company largely controls, is now advising D. Nelson in his demands on Secretary Ickes that the Olympic National Park be opened to Weyerhaeuser and others for more sitka spruce.

It All Depends

Chief indoor sport of Colorado's rotund Republican Representative J. Edgar Chenoweth is denouncing Federal extravagance. When President Roosevelt presented Crown Princess Martha of Norway with a subchaser, Chenoweth exclaimed: "It is time to stop giving away valuable American property like a bridge prize."

However, the Coloradan sees nothing wrong in accepting "bridge prizes" for self and family. For more than two years, the Government has been paying his son, Bill Chenoweth, for not working in his father's office.

Young Chenweth is listed on the Congressional payroll at $1,200 a year. Yet he hasn't set foot in Washington for a year and a half and hasn't worked in his father's office for more than two years, though he has been receiving a salary from the Government ever since Congressman Chenoweth came to Washington in January, 1941.

During most of this time he was a student at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, where his Government pay checks helped him buy an education.

Merry-Go-Round

Naval men, always suspicious, say Lord Louis Mountbatten, new commander of the Burma Expedition, is jinxed. He took two ships, the Javelin and the Kelly, shot from under him and suffered terrific casualties in the Dieppe raid. Others say it is bravery . . . Both schools agree, however, that victory in this war depends on about 90 per cent genius and 10 per cent luck. If you lack that 10 per cent of luck, you're jinxed . . . Keep an eye on Judge Edgar C. Bennett of Marysville, Kans., as the next U. S. District judge in Kansas . . . Mrs. Vanderbilt has been showing off Lili Damita, former wife of Errol Flynn, to the blue-bloods of Newport society . . . Former Governor Max Gardner of North Carolina says: "Everyone should have a hobby. Some people run to horses, others to hounds, others to livestock, stamps, farms, wine and women. My hobby is people." Which is true. Max gets more joy out of the radiant face of a poor boy or girl striving for an education than anything else on earth. He has spent most of his summer and a large part of his fortune raising half a million dollars for the Gardner-Webb Junior College for rural boys and girls.

Loan League Sets 15 Million As Bond Quota

By S. Oliver Goodman

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League will attempt to raise 15 million of Washington's 94 million quota in the Third War Bond Drive, it was learned last night following an executive meeting of the league yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel.

This ambitious goal would triple the five million raised by the league in the previous campaign.

Clarence E. Kefauver, vice president of the league, presided at the rally and presented Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the building and loan committee, as speaker. Baltz outlined the tremendous task confronting war bond campaigners in attaining the goal and the importance of individual associations in the general selling plan.

He urged each member unit to earmark its advertising program during the campaign to strong sales messages on war bonds. In addition, he recommended that the league itself support the third war bond drive by cooperative advertising in Washington newspapers.

This recommendation was unanimously adopted and the advertising committee of the league, headed by Edward L. McAleer and including Carl H. Ellingson and Edward K. Jones, will meet at an early date and work out the details.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Stores' Inventories Off 26%

Merchandise on hand in Washington department stores on July 31 was 26 per cent under that on the same date last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. Inventories of stores in the entire Fifth Reserve District averaged 15 per cent less on the same date.

Attesting to the current difficulty in replenishing stocks, the bank added that outstanding orders of local stores were 201 per cent heavier on July 31 than on the corresponding 1942 date. In the entire Reserve district such orders were 173 per cent larger.

Seven-month sales of local stores were reported 8 per cent improved over the same period last year, while the Fifth District as a whole showed a gain of 15 per cent.

Washington collections on charge accounts in July were 59 per cent of such accounts due on July 1, the bank stated. This was slightly better than the average of 58 per cent for the Fifth District.

Rubber Strides Stressed Here

Feeding Uncle Sam's Army and America's 35 million families with our normal supplies of wheat cut off, while learning to make bread from soy beans or some synthetic replacement, would represent an achievement comparable to the job done by the Nation's rubber industry since Pearl Harbor, William S. Richardson, general manager of industrial products division of the B. F. Goodrich Co., told a group of Government and military officials at the Hotel Statler last night.

Richardson recalled that in 1940, when his company first called national attention to the need for a large-scale synthetic rubber industry as a national insurance policy, only a few tons of synthetic rubber were produced in this country, which consumed 648,000 tons of crude rubber annually.

At that time, he said, John L. Collyer, president of the Goodrich company, in testifying before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, not only urged the stockpiling of crude rubber and production of synthetic, but emphasized that development work on the use of synthetic rubber was a very important part of the entire problem.

Richardson paid tribute to the collaboration between Government and industry which "in an amazingly short time will put a billion-dollar industry on an entirely new foundation in terms of its principal raw material."

Dome Mines Head Is Visitor

Clifford W. Michel a partner in J. S. Bache & Co. and newly-elected president of Dome Mines, Ltd., was in Washington yesterday as a visitor to the local office of the banking and brokerage firm.

Michel's election as president of the Canadian gold mining company, succeeding Jules S. Bache, was announced earlier this week. Bache was named to the new post of chairman of mining firm's board.

Michel said here that Bache's retirement as Dome president was due to the latter's desire to transfer the active detailed direction to younger hands. In addition to the presidency, Michel will continue as treasurer and chairman of the finance committee. J. H. Stovel, vice president and general manager of Dome, has been elected a director also, succeeding J. G. Baragwanath.

R. E. Johnson Joins Navy

Robert E. Johnson, director of advertising and publicity for United Air Lines, has been given leave of absence by the company to accept a commission as lieutenant (j. g.) in the U. S. Naval Reserve. He has reported to Quonset Point, Rhode Island, for training as an aviation officer.

Harold Crary, vice president in charge of traffic for United, will supervise the advertising and publicity activities of the company during Lieutenant Johnson's absence.

Wynn to Face Yanks in First of 4-Game Set

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Sept. 2.—It has been fashionable this season to describe the Yankees as not much of a ball team, but there they are 10 games out in front breezing to the pennant.

The trouble is, of course, that the Yankees are inevitably compared with great Yankee teams of the past. This Yankee team broke the record the other day for hitting into double plays. That's not Yankee tradition. There's the suggestion, too, that these Yankees are operating in a weaker league, which is true enough.

POVICH

Manager Joe McCarthy this year is operating without Joe Di Maggio, Tommy Henrich, Red Rolfe and Red Ruffing. Aging Bill Dickey is only an occasional catcher. But the Yankees are doing very well, nevertheless. What then is their magic?

It's pretty well established by this time that a Yankee uniform doesn't hurt a ball player. Nick Etten is the latest shining example. He was a mere plodder with the Phillies in the National League. The Yankees bought him, he caught the Yankee spirit, became a good first baseman and until recently was leading the league in runs batted in.

Roy Weatherly never played as well for Cleveland as he has for the Yankees. Last year Roy Cullenbine, an ordinary outfielder with the Nats, joined the Yankees in their pennant drive and surpassed himself. As soon as ball players gain the right to wear "New York" across their chests they get a terrific lift, seemingly.

At this time, though, Joe McCarthy's favorite ball player is his rookie third baseman, Bill Johnson. He came off the Yankees' Newark farm along with George Stirnweiss. The latter was supposed to be the hot article of the pair, but big league pitching stopped him. Johnson is a better hitter with the Yankees than he was for Newark.

Young Johnson is very apt to be the R[illegible]kie of The Year. Around third base he is giving the club as good protection as it ever received received from Red Rolfe, who was tops for several years. He's a more valuable hitter than Rolfe with his .296 batting average and his 83 runs driven in to this point.

The fellow who guarantees that the Yankees will have no prolonged losing streaks is Spurgeon (Spud)) Chandler, who has won 17 games against only 3 defeats. Beating the Yankees when Chandler is on the mound has been the American League's toughest job of the season. He is the chief reason why the Yankees have won all of their last 13 series.

Chandler is a striking refutation of the suspicion that former football players don't make good in the big leagues. They're supposed to come out of football muscle bound around the chest and shoulders, but Chandler was a star for three years with Georgia. He's as supple as ever.

This Yankee team has plenty of "bounce," too. In winning their last 13 series against various clubs, they proved a come-back team. They lost the opening game of a series to the A's, and won the series. They were licked in the first two games at St. Louis, and won the last three. The White Sox beat them in the opener, but couldn't win the series. They lost the first two at Cleveland, and the first two at Detroit and ended up winning three in a row from each club.

As for that dubious accomplishment of hitting into more double plays than any other club, the Yankees may not like it, but they have one consolation. Hitting into double plays means that a team is putting runners on base. The team that doesn't hit into double plays has, more often than not, nobody on base to be doubled up.

The Yankees, operating on the theory that a game won from any club is as valuable as a game won from any other, had been kicking the daylights out of the tail-end teams. They have won 28 out of 53 games with the Red Sox, Browns and Philadelphia, and have been holding their own nicely with the first division teams. The only club which has held the Yankees even this year is the Tigers, who have split 18 engagements. The Yanks hold an edge over every other team.

Manager Joe McCarthy this year for the first time has been compelled to maneuver with his talent. In past seasons, McCarthy's formality of handing a starting line-up to the umpires with merely that. Every player was a fixture, but during the club's recent Western trip, McCarthy changed his line-up nearly every day. Etten, at first, Gordon at second, Johnson at third, and Keller in left field, have been the only set performers. McCarthy has been juggling every other position, and that 10-game lead stamps it as a pretty good act by the Yankee manager.

Rookie Comp to Take Over Passing Job With Packers

St. Benedict's Star to Get First Test Against Redskins in Baltimore Game

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Without a talented forward passer such as Arnie Herber or Cecil Isbell for the first time in many years, Green Bay Packer Coach Curly Lambeau will trust his passing to Rookie Irving Comp against the Redskins in the exhibition game Sunday at 2 p. m. in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium.

Comp was not a big name among college passers last year as he hurled for St. Benedict's College of Atchison, Kans., but Lambeau and Don Hutson are both convinced the youngster will, at least, partially fill the bill in the absence of Isbell, who accepted a contract as backfield coach at his alma mater, Purdue.

Comp has been spending hours with Hutson, learning the latter's stop-and-quick-break style and Hutson reported tremendous improvement in the rookie's passing. When asked about Comp's ability while in Chicago for the All-Star game, Coach Lambeau said the youngster was not what he expected, but Curly smiled when he said it.

Celebrating Anniversary

Lambeau is celebrating his silver anniversary as coach of the Green Bay eleven, 23 of those years in the National Football League, where the Packers have won five national titles and one Western championship.

The Packers are conceded to have the best tackle protection in the league in Buford Ray, the 250-pounder in his sixth year of proball; Chet Adams, picked up from the Cleveland Rams, a member of the all-league second team last year; Dick Wildung, Minnesota's All-American, who was Lambeau's first choice in the college draft, and Tiny Croft, the 300-pound youngster acquired from the Redskins via the waiver route last year.

Croft was released to the Packers following the Labor Day exhibition game in Baltimore which the Redskins won, and his release was alright with the Redskin regulars. Croft had been stepping all over the Redskin tackles and guards in line scrimmages and was generally in the way. The Packers were short of tackles at the time, however, and Croft developed fast as the season progressed and in late season he was termed the most improved lineman in the league.

The Packers were hit by the loss of manpower but not too hard. They still have the Brocks, Charley at center and Lewis in the backfield, no relation; Tony Canadeo, who runs and can help with the passing; Andy Uram, Joe Laws, Larry Craig, Buckets Goldenberg and others, including Hutson who is a pretty good set of ends in himself. The Packers may accent a running attack more than usual in Isbell's absence.

The Baltimore appearance will be the only showing of the Packers near Washington this season, as the Redskins meet Green Bay in Milwaukee in the regular season game. The Packers will arrive in Baltimore this morning and will remain in the East next week for an exhibition game next Saturday against the Phil-Pitts in Philadelphia.

The Redskins were joined for the Packer exhibition by Roman Bentz, the 220-pound tackle from Tulane who played in the squad game on the Coast and all-star game. Bentz is awaiting a Navy call, but may play 30 days or more.

End Bob McChesney and Guard Joe Zeno, both standouts for the 'Skins in the all-star game, are taped with shoulder injuries, but McChesney is expected to be in shape to start against the Packers. Zeno may be out for a week or more with his badly bruised shoulder.

Hagen, Kirkwood Match 'Dub' Event, Says 'the Haig'

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 2.—Walter Hagen made it clear today that neither for money nor marbles is he interested in a golf match with trick shot artist Joe Kirkwood.

"What makes Kirkwood think the public is interested in a couple of dubs playing?" retored The Haig, winner of dozens of major titles, to the latest challenge by Kirkwood, who expressed bitter disappointment over being left off Hagen's challenge squad in the recent Ryder Cup matches.

"As to his chances of beating me, he's never been able to do it," Hagen added, "even though I've been taking him around the globe for 20 years. I'll leave it to the record books as to who was the better player."

Segura Beats Bitsy Grant In Nat'l Play

Atlantan Defeated In Straight Sets; D. C. Women Bow In Doubles Event

By International News Service

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Pvt. Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, for 13 years a foremost tennis figure, was eliminated from the men's national singles championships today by Pancho Segura of Ecuador, 6—3, 6—1.

Showing only occasional flashes of the form that put him among the ranks of Davis Cup players, Grant was no match for Segura, who is seeking his seventh straight tournament victory. The South American's unique two-handed smash was a dominant factor.

John Kramer, the Los Angeles forecourt expert who will face Segura in the quarter-finals tomorrow, shuffled the hopes of one of America's leading tennis families when he defeated Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, 6—1, 6—2. Falkenburg's brother, Tom, was defeated yesterday by Chicago's Seymour Greenburg.

Most Impressive of Tourney

The Kramer-Falkenburg contest was the most impressive all-court game so far seen in the tourney. Both players found the range as the match warmed up. Kramer's smashes and volleys were fired with deadly accuracy, strengthening the belief that he might prove Segura's nemesis tomorrow.

Hard-hitting Louise Brough, the Beverly Hills girl who is favored to take the women's national singles championship, led the advance into the quarter finals with a resounding victory over Katherine Winthrop, South Hamilton, Mass., 6—2, 6—1.

Miss Winthrop quickly became unnerved by Louise's change of pace, and the California star hammered away at her opponent's backhand.

The 1941 national titlist, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, gave another exhibition of deep, accurate driving from the baseline in defeating Peggy Welsh of Lima, Pa., 6—1, 6—1. The tournament fortunes of the Cookes were kept intact when Mrs. Cooke's husband, Lieut. Elwood Cooke, USN, defeated Harris Everett of Miami, 6—2, 6—2.

Pauline Betz Wins

Pauline Betz, defending titleholder, went into the women's quarter-final with a weird exhibition of erratic tennis that was nevertheless good enough to defeat Mrs. Helen Rihbany of Greenwich, Conn., 6—4, 6—4.

Former Davis Cupper Joe Hunt of Annapolis, easily swept James Brink out of the tourney, trampling over the Seattle boy, 6—0, 6—1, with little effort.

In the men's doubles, William Talbert of Cincinnati, and PFC. David Freeman defeated Ladislav Hecht, Kew Gardens, N. Y., and Charles Hare, Fort Meade, Md., 6—8, 6—2, 6—4.

In the Doubles, Robert Falkenburg, Hollywood and James Brink, Seattle, defeated James Evert and Seymoure Greenberg, Chicago, 6—4, 6—4.

John Van Ryn, Washington, and Lieut. Joseph R. Hunt, Annapolis, defeated Bob Kring, Los Angeles, and Jack Tuero, New Orleans, 6—1, 7—5.

Seaman John Kramer and Pvt. Frank Parker, Los Angeles, defeated Lieut. Elwood Cooke and Seaman John H. Cushingham, Pensacola, Fla., 6—1, 6—3.

D. C. Team Beaten

In the women's doubles, Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, and Doris Hart, Miami, defeated Mrs. Leanor P. Cushingham and Mrs. Norma T. Barber, New York, 6—1, 6—3.

Mary Arnold, Los Angeles and Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, eliminated Dorothy Head, Berkeley, Calif., and Barbara Scofield, San Francisco, 6—3, 7—5.

Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, Washington, and Mrs. Jacques Hunt, Annapolis, beat Mrs. David Gray and Mrs. Mary Cootes Belin, Washington, 8—6, 6—1.

Bithorn, Hack Team to Beat Reds for Cubs

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 2.—Hi Bithorn, with three-hit hurling, and Stan Hack, with a four-for-four at bat, teamed today as Chicago's Cubs bowed out of Crosley Field for the season with a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Hack accounted for half of Elmer Riddle's ration of safeties for the day, his first single driving in Clyde McCullough and Len Meruldo during the three-run second.

Ray Mueller's third inning double netted the Reds' only score after he advanced on an infield play and crossed the plate on Lonnie Frey's fly to Ival Goodman. Otherwise, only the veteran Estel Crabtree and Eric Tipton were able to connect with Bithorn's offerings.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (AP).—Butch Nieman drove home two runs with a triple in the tenth inning to give the Boston Braves a 3 to 2 victory over the Phillies tonight.

In the Phillies' half of the tenth, Jim Wasdell duplicated Nieman's wallop, scoring Babe Dahlgren, who had walked, but was left on third when Pinchhitter Schoolboy Rowe fanned.

Army to Play Navy, Site Undetermined

War Department Official Says Game Is O.K.; Washington Among Cities as Possible Scene

Football's super-spectacle, the Army-Navy game, broke into the clear yesterday. The War Department let it be known the military and naval academy teams would meet in 1943, John J. McCloy, assistant secretary, telling a press conference:

"It is my understanding that the game is to be played, but there is no decision yet as to where," the Associated Press reported.

The game at times had appeared bottled up and McCloy's announcement marked a War Department concession to the football cause.

Since the start of the war, the Army has officially opposed "sports as normal," contending that cadets and soldier-trainees in colleges are too busy for varsity athletics. The Navy, on the other hand, has indorsed football as part of its physical conditioning program.

Army Host Team

McCloy's comment that no decision has been reached as to the site indicated that West Point, the host team, may engage the Midshipmen gridders at a metropolitan center such as New York, Philadelphia, Washington or Baltimore.

Last year's contest was played at Annapolis before only about 14,000 spectators because the ticket sale was limited to residents of the Maryland capital. The Army opposed playing of the game even then, partly because of gasoline shortages and transportation difficulties, but President Roosevelt authorized the contest when high naval authorities insisted the traditional series be continued.

When football schedules were arranged this year, the Army-Navy contest was booked for West Point November 27, but the War Department hinted it might not go on. Secretary of War Stimson has said he felt it unwise for the services to sponsor the game when the Government was urging civilians to conserve gasoline, curtail travel and cut down on unnecessary expenditures.

The Navy, which has indorsed a huge football program for its preflight cadets and V-12 college trainees, continued to plug for the game, and the Army apparently gave in.

Philadelphia Seeks Game for Bond Drive

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Philadelphia War Bond Committee urged tonight that the Army-Navy game be brought back to Philadelphia's municipal stadium to help the third war loan drive.

Roger W. Clipp, chairman of the bond promotion committee, said it would be a "good chance lost" if the game were played at West Point, where it is tentatively scheduled for November 27.

He suggested that admission be by purchase of war bonds, "say, a reserved seat for a $1000 bond."

"Residents of this city," Clipp said, "would pack the stadium to its 105,000 capacity."

Grays Lose, 4 to 2; Gibson Honored

"Josh" Gibson, Homestead Grays' slugging catcher, received a huge bat crammed with money as 4500 paid tribute to him last night at Griffith Stadium, but the Philadelphia Stars took the ball game, 4-2 after rain had interrupted for over an hour.

The Stars tallied three times in the third and once again in the fourth to sew up the verdict despite the fact the Grays outhit the visitors, 8-4.

Dodgers Rally To Top Giants By 4-3 Score

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Sept. 2.—The Brooklyn Dodgers rallied for three runs in the last two innings today to beat the New York Giants, 4 to 3, and extend their current winning streak to six games.

Rookie Luis Rodriguez Olmo was the star of the uprising. His single was the first of four hits that brought two runs in the eighth inning and in the ninth he singled with two on and two out to drive in the winning run.

Curt Davis, who went to the mound in the eighth, was credited with the victory, his eighth. Hal Gregg, who started for the Dodgers, was hit on his right hand by a batted ball in the sixth and had to retire.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 2 (AP).—Jack Manders, former Minnesota and Chicago Bears backfield star, won't be able to accept Clark Shaughnessy's offer to join his University of Pittsburgh coaching staff.

Manders wired Shaughnessy the manpower shortage won't permit the Chicago Printing Co., for which he works, to grant him a leave of absence.

Tribe Beats Chisox, 2-1, Behind Smith

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Sept. 2.—Held hitless until two were out in the sxth inning, the Clevaland Indians bunched four hits and whipped the Chicago White Sox, 2 to 1, in the opener of the teams' final 1943 series.

Lefty Al Smith and Chicago's Orval Grove battled it out in the pitchers mound for the victory, yielding only five hits apiece. The Chisox run was tallied in the first frame.

Armstrong-White Fight Off, Says Coast Official

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 2.—There will be no Henry Armstrong-Slugger White fight September 18.

Everett Sanders of the California Athletic Commission said today he would not consent to the scheduled 10-round contest because of the possible harm to Armstrong, who has been advised by his physicians that if he continues his ring career he may lose his sight.

"I am speaking for myself when I say the bout is off," Sanders explained, "but I have talked to A. P. Entenza and Jules Covey of the commission and I know they feel as I do."

Armstrong announced his retirement in New York after Ray Robinson beat him decisively. Sanders pointed out that this announcement had hurt the drawing power of the proposed bout in Los Angeles with Luther (Slugger) White of Baltimore.

35 Gridmen Report To Western Coach

Western High's football squad held its first drill yesterday with 35 men reporting to Coach Fred Mulvey. Six lettermen are available for the line but Mulvey will have to develop an entire new backfield. Ten additional candidates are expected to report next week. Western drills today at 5 p. m. and will have another session Saturday at 10 a. m.

New Infield To Be Tried By Bluege

Priddy to Start At Third, Roberts At Short, Myatt At Second Base

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

New York, Sept. 2.—Draped around the broad shoulders of Early Wynn are the Nats' hopes of putting a dent in the 10-game lead of the Yankees tomorrow when the two clubs open a four-game series in Yankee Stadium.

In naming Wynn to pitch the series opener, Manager Ossie Bluege is thrusting his best pitching arm forward. Bluege is high on the husky young right-hander who has won 15 games this season.

The task that confronts the Nats in the series here is emphasized by the recent record of the Yankees, who have not lost any of the last 13 series they have played. However, one of the clubs to beat the Yankees in any series was the Nats, who won three out of five games on their previous trip to Yankee Stadium.

All of Staff Rested

Bluege believes, however, that he holds a strong hand for the coming jousts with the league leaders. All of his ten-man pitching staff is completely rested and he can muster, besides Wynn, Johnny Niggeling, who has always been effective against the Yanks, and Milo Candini who pitched a two-hit shutout the last time he faced the New York club.

Buck Newsom is scheduled to start one of the four games, with Bluege shelving Dutch Leonard in favor of Blustering Buck, "but Leonard is very apt to be in the bullpen when Newsom pitches," said Bluege. He indicated that at the first sign of distress, Newsom would be withdrawn.

The Nats' manager is confidently experimenting with a new infield for the Yankees series, with Gerry Priddy moved to third base, a position he played at various times with the Yankees last year, and Rookie Charlie Roberts, up from Montgomery, Ala., in the shortstop post. George Myatt, lately on a hitting rampage, will continue at second base.

The series looms doubly important, for the Nats, inasmuch as it holds the club's last slender chance of heading off the Yankees for the pennant, and will carry, too, much of the Nats' chances of finishing in second place.

Hopes for Four Straight

"Anything less than four straight over the Yankees won't do us a lot of good in the pennant race, and we've got to break even, at least, to hold onto second place," Bluege pointed out.

The Nats arrived in New York tonight with a full squad with the exception of Third Baseman Harland Clift who is recuperating from mumps at his St. Louis home.

Outfielder Bob Johnson, who was also stricken ill at St. Louis, reports shimself ready to play, but against right-handed pitching Bluege will start an outfield comprised of Stan Spence, George Case and Gene Moore.

Buddy Baer's Wife Sues for Divorce

Sacramento, Calif., Sept. 2 (AP).—Buddy Baer, former heavyweight boxer, brother of former World's Heavyweight Champion Max Baer, and now a corporal in the Army, was sued for divorce yesterday.

Ralpha Pearl Baer charges extreme cruelty and asks custody of her 2-year-old daughter and support for the child. A property settlement has been reached out of court.

113 Juveniles Named for Pimlico Futurity on November 3

Several Ace 2-Year-Olds Are Missing

Bee Mac, Jazrahel Are Not Eligible; Occupy, By Jimminy, Boy Knight in Line

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 2.—One hundred and thirteen colts and fillies were named today as eligible for the twenty-first running of the Pimlico Futurity, which usually provides a tip-off to the thoroughbreds which will be in the running for the 3-year-old classics.

This year's renewal of the $15,000 added Maryland Jockey Club classic will be staged at Pimlico on November 3 during the four Maryland tracks' consolidated 30-day meeting.

The list of 113 eligibles for the Futurity—the survivors of an original nomination list of 1089—includes virtually every major winner of the current crop of 2-year-old colts except John Marsch's Jazrahel, first home in the Arlington Futurity, and so may help to untangle the present divisional jumble.

Occupy Eligible

The eligible colts include Marsch's Occupy, a full brother to Occupation; A. C. Ernst's Alorter, winner of three stakes around Chicago; Crispin Oglebay's Boy Knight, second to Bee Mac in the Saratoga Hopeful; Alfred P. Parker's By Jimminy, winner of the Grand Union Hotel stakes; Calumet Farm's Pensive; Longchamps Farms' Professor Lee and R. Sterling Clark's Smolensko.

Of the four fillies who have been grabbing a good share of headlines and money away from the boys—Bee Mac, Mrs. Ames, Cocopet and Twilight Tear—not one was nominated.

Stake-winning fillies which are eligible include Belair stud's Thread O'Gold, Brookmeade stable's Dare Me, Grant Thorn's Fire Sticky and C. V. Whitney's Boojiana.

Distance Test

The Futurity, run at a mile and one-sixteenth, is the richest stake for juveniles over a distance of ground and frequently gives an indication of how the 2-year-old stars will go in the longer classics of the following year.

In last year's renewal Count Fleet stamped himself the winter book favorite when he turned in a convincing decision over Occupation, although the latter came out of the race with a bad leg.

Fort Devens Beats Athletics, 4 to 1

Fort Devens, Mass., Sept 2 (AP).—Eddie Murphy gained his third straight victory over major league opposition by pitching the crack Fort Devens Reception Center team to a 5-1 win over the Philadelphia Athletics today before a military crowd of 12,000.

Garvin's Wins, 4-0, for City Softball Title

A pair of homers, one over the fence and the other inside the park, backed excellent pitching by Les Bluhm to bring the Garvin's Grill ten the District softball championship last night. The Grillmen, underdogs when the series began, defeated the Briggs Clarifiers, 4-0, in the city series final before a crowd of 600.

The victory sends the Grill club into the regional championships starting Saturday at Baltimore and, if successful, they will go to the finals in Detroit late this month.

Bluhm, who was pitching his third game in four nights having knocked the favored Kavokas Grill ten out Wednesday, turned in a five-hit game. The Navy Department welding engineer, who hails from Milwaukee, Wis., used a drop effectively and was in danger in only the sixth inning when he developed a wild streak.

Jerry Zanlotti, who stole home in the ninth inning to bring Heurich's the hard ball city title Wednesday, gave Garvin's their first two runs in the first inning with a homer over the left field fense, scoring Hossick ahead of him. George Larrick, a District fireman, provided the other circuit clout, the ball dropping against the fence in right field. Hughes was on base at the time.

Rodger Sawtell, for Briggs, was nicked for 11 hits but performed creditably in the pinches with the exception of his two home run pitches. Shortfielder Bradfield connected for three of the five Briggs hits.

Bluhm, who fanned 12 batters last night, whiffed 12 in the Kavakos game and 16 two nights before that.

The winning team will be honored next Thursday when Dan Holland, general manager of the local Coca Cola Co., will present Garvin's Grill with the trophy.

A softball tournament has been arranged to start on Tuesday. Garvin's will play the winner.

Tigers Defeat Browns Twice, 5-4 and 8-5

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 2.—The Detroit Tigers swept their second successive double-header from the St. Louis Browns, winning 5 to 4 and 8 to 5 today behind the pitching of Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Hal Newhouser.

The Tigers rallied for two runs in the ninth to take the opener. George McQuinn's single gave the Brown a 4-to-3 lead in the top half of the inning, but Rookie Dick Wakefield's single tied it up for Detroit and Pinky Higgins' single with the bases loaded broke up the game.

In the nightcap Newhouser snapped a personal nine-game losing streak, but needed help in the ninth to gain his eighth victory. Denny Galehouse, who owned four straight victories over Detroit, was hammered for seven runs in six innings. Ned Harris homered for Detroit.

Trout captured his sixteenth victory in the opener. By getting one in each game, Rudy York became the first American Leaguer to drive in 100 runs.

Moran Is Named Gamecock Coach

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 2.—Appointment of Lieut. James Patrick Moran, USNR, as head football coach for the University of South Carolina was announced today by President J. Glon McKissick.

Moran's appointment signaled the beginning of formal practice sessions for the 40-member squad of Naval V-12 and V-5 trainees.

Moran, executive officer and athletic director of the CAA War Training Service Unit (Naval Aviation) at the university, is a Holy Cross graduate of 1935, where he was an outstanding guard. He played for the Boston Redskins in 1935 and 1936.

He was coach at Boston College High School from 1935 to 1942, when he entered the Navy.

Lieut. J. E. Blount, a former Furman football player, and in charge of the war training service program at the university, will assist Moran.

Bar to Hold Noel Charge Investigation

Writer Pointed To 'Deterioration' Of Profession in District Circles

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

Milton I. King, president of the District Bar Association, promised yesterday that an investigation would be made of charges in an article written for the current issue of the Bar Association Journal by a local attorney who states the interlopers, lame ducks, sundowners and adherents of leaches are causing a deterioration of the legal profession here.

King also said he would call a meeting of the five officers and seven directors of the Bar Association to determine whether the article, titled "The Dunkerque of the Bar or a Further I. Q. Test, by F. Regis Noel," should have been printed in the publication. The editor in chief of the magazine is James J. Hayden. King insisted, however, that not even in the Journal does he believe in "restricting freedom of the press."

"Czar of the Bar"

Noel, who told a reporter he was "Czar of the Bar," has been an attorney here for more than 30 years, is a former professor of jurisprudence at Georgetown University and was president of the bar association in 1933-1934.

In his article, Noel charges the I. Q. rating of the local bar is rapidly falling, and as a result, if something is not done about present conditions, the bar will "not survive as one of the learned profesisons" but will deteriorate into a "commerce."

Noel says the war was a financial godsend to the local bar, but after the war there will be a return to "dog eat dog." He said the number of lawyers here has swollen all out of proportion by the influx of unqualified lawyers from other parts of the country who "poach on the preserves," leaving "only the trials and the difficult knots" to the field. He asks, "Why all the travail of high school, college, law school and bar admissions by local students if a 'foreigner's' diploma is merely a railroad ticket?"

Noel writes, "Now is the time when bold and drastic action should be taken, first to restrict the practice of law in the District of Columbia; secondly, to curtail admissions, and thirdly, to clean out and elevate the standing of the local bar."

He suggests the cure to all this is to shift jurisdiction over admissions, discipline and all such matters from the District Court to the United States Court of Appeals. Long a critic of certain members of the District Court bench, Noel says the District Court has failed in its duties to lawyers here.

He says while the District Court is very generous in distributing cases of "worthy criminals" and indigents unable to pay fees to attorneys in general, it has restricted to a limited few the lucrative appointments to "receiverships, guardian-ad-litem, special masters and such matters as pro tanto compensation."

Noel, in what he terms a "passing reference to the pusillanimity of the bar," Noel states many of the judges and justices here are unsuited for their jobs. For example, he says suggestions for vacancies to the bench here at present are "nothing but a conspiracy of four members of the bar association's committee on the selection of judges." He says, instead of "forcing new judges to learn our practice, during the past 20 years the bar has not only permitted but assisted in blasting our practice in order that incompetent outsiders may preside over the courts."

They asked for proof of Noel's charges. Noel refused to demonstrate this proof, but said he had it all in his files.

Bewildered Post Scribe Leads Band

HELENE CHAMPLAIN
Some applause, one whistle

By Helene Champlain
Post Staff Writer

'So you want to lead a band?" Sammy Kaye, the swing-and-sway maestro, queries.

"So I want to lead a band," I, a mere Post reporter, retorted.

So I led a band, and the early afternoon audience didn't leave its seats in a body—some even applauded, and one or two gave out with a street-corner whistle.

When a writer momentarily forsakes her chosen profession to find out what gives with this band-leading jive, anything could happen, but, at least, the worst didn't. This is what did:

Volunteers for Job

Leader Kaye introduced his musical feature which allows all those with an uncontrollable urge to lead a band to try their hand with a baton. Volunteers from the audience were called for, and a wildly waved black purse in the third row resulted in my being one of the quartet chosen for the initial Washington performance at the Capitol Theater.

If Sammy had asked me what number I would like to front his orchestra for, "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered" would have been the most appropriate choice.

Instead he asked me where I came from and what I did during my working hours and such, which led to our making sundry jocular remarks, which the audience may or may not have appreciated. When laughter came, I was never quite sure whether it was for me or my strictly impromptu attempts at humor.

"Have you ever led a band before," Sammy asked, as if the answer, in my quaking knees and semi-quaking voice weren't obvious.

"This is the closest I've ever been to a band," I said, and there were attempts (strictly for the gag) on the part of bandleader and bandsmen to bring me still closer. The audience seemed to enjoy this, but I was too stage-struck to care.

The Thrills Begin

Then when Sammy asked why I wanted to lead a band, I gave the automatic answer of an ever-interested reporter: a story, anything for a story.

The aforementioned story reached its climax when I, armed only with a baton, faced the dozen-odd men, who were awaiting my every gesture. My first was a false one, it seemed that I didn't wave the stick quickly enough and the boys, reveling in my predicament, held the first note for several unpleasant minutes. I caught on then, and, though I may never get another job as a bandleader, I managed to wave them through the number. It was "Canteen Bonds," I am told, but I was too overcome with the feeling of power over all men who were waiting to make music according to the whim of my baton, to be sure.

And then my brief stage career was over.

A young sailor named Dick McCarthy was judged a better bandleader than I, and, adjusting my position to that of an objective reporter merely standing by to review the proceedings, I mused that the audience majority can't be wrong, and Dick indeed had the orchestra jumping.

Being a bandleader was fun, but it was evidently not my forte.

52 GU War Class Men Graduated

First Group Ends Work in Course Accelerated to Meet Emergency

Addressing the first class to be graduated under the three-year accelerated course at Georgetown University, Father Stephen F. McNamee, dean of the college of arts and sciences, charged 52 men assembled in farewell meeting last night to "look out and see that you have done so little, and that there is so much to do."

Forty of the men will receive diplomas from the same college September 12, and 12 will be graduated from the university's school of foreign service.

Father McNamee told the young men under the wartime accelerated program they leave school quickly, but in reality they never leave, but always remain a part of the school. They gain there material with which to build for time and eternity, he said.

Others who spoke to the men gathered in the Pan-American Room of the Mayflower Hotel were Father Daniel McFadden, professor of ethics; Father Eugene Gallagher, professor of religion; Dr. Tibor Kerekes, professor of history; Father Richard Law, prefect of discipline; Father John Kehoe, director of athletics; Joseph Gardner, coach, and William E. O'Connor, president of the class. James Byrd acted as chairman, and Students Gus Callahan, John Quigley and John Healey delivered parting remarks on behalf of their fellows.

D. C. Marine Pilot Downs Four Zeros In Half an Hour

The feat of Lieut. Kenneth A. Walsh, 27, Marine Corps pilot, who downed four Zero planes in half an hour and thus swelled his total to 20, was confirmed last night in an Associated Press dispatch from Guadalcanal.

At the same time it was announced that Comdr. Harry E. Sears of Chevy Chase, Md., was the leader of a patrol of eight bombers in the same area which scored a direct hit and three near-misses on a Jap destroyer leader, leaving the ship smoking and moving slowly.

Lieutenant Walsh's wife lives at 1228 Newton pl. ne. After he had knocked his fourth plane down in 30 minutes he was shot down for the third time in his career as a pilot. He was rescued from the sea.

Both actions came, it was reported, in a raid on Japan's Kahili airdrome on Bougainville Island in the Solomons.

Sailors to Be Given Gray Working Uniforms

Gray working uniforms for naval enlisted men aboard ship will be substituted for the present white uniforms.

Blue dungarees will continue to be worn for work on ship and ashore but issuance of the gray working uniforms, the Navy said yesterday, is expected to ease the wear on dungarees and thereby reduce replacements.

Court Decrees

Barney Still To Play With D. C. 'Ducks'

BARNEY COX
And his mother, who won him

Three-year-old Barney Cox, whose pretty pranks in the courtroom erased much of the tragedy of his parent's dispute over who should keep him, slept soundly yesterday while Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court ordered the boy to remain in the custody of the mother.

Barney's parents have been estranged for several months. His mother, Mrs. Cleo Cox, 20, of 1178 Morse st. nw., is a Navy Yard restaurant waitress. Her attorney, Milton I. Lewis, claims she ran away from her husband because he beat her. The father, Carson Cox, 27, a truck driver for a sawmill in Triplett, N. C., wants Barney back because he can offer him the benefits of life in the country.

Barney, while the solemn proceedings based on a habeas corpus writ by the father were going on, bounced around the court room, climbing first onto the lap of his father, then to the spectators and finally to his mother. The most interesting part of the whole case to Barney was a cardboard duck given to him by reporters.

Justice McGuire heard testimony from many witnesses that both father and mother were "good people" but couldn't get along together.

Finally, Justice McGuire decreed that, while he would have liked to award Barney to the father who could give him the "fresh milk and more beef than you can get in Washington," Barney's tender years constrained him to award the child to the mother.

Barney wasn't paying attention. He was fast asleep in his mother's lap and held tightly to him the pasteboard duck, for the day before, Justice McGuire had decreed that "Barney is a duck hunter."

22 Casualties Listed

The Navy last night announced 22 casualties, including seven dead, 13 wounded and two missing. In addition, five men previously listed as missing were reported dead. This brings the total of Navy, Marine and Coast Guard casualties reported since Pearl Harbor to 29,035, including 10,039 dead, 5089 wounded, 9735 missing and 4172 prisoners of war.

Victory Sidelights

Tin Can Drive to Continue Despite Early Poor Showing

The campaign to pick up tin cans for salvage from apartment houses the third Thursday of each month will continue despite the small collection made during the one-day drive, August 27, it was announced yesterday by the Commercial Tin Can Salvage Committee which met at the Heurich Brewery. Less than 18,000 pounds was collected.

Horace Walker, executive secretary for the District salvage committee, blamed the poor showing on noncooperation.

A leaflet campaign to educate the public in the importance of the collection was mapped by the salvage committee.

Walker stressed the importance of having individual apartment dwellers responsible for the collection in the apartment houses rather than leaving it to resident managers or janitors who already are overburdened with work. Tin cans, opened at both ends and flattened, should be placed in containers at the front entrances to apartment buildings on the day of the collection.

Schmitz Elected

William J. Schmitz, 4955 Clark pl. nw., was elected president of the Society of the Third Division at the annual election, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers elected were: Conrad Leue, 1006 11th st. nw., vice president; William A. Link of Cheverly, Md., treasurer; Harry Cedar of Arlington, Va., secretary; August J. Nogara of 1800 Kilbourne pl. nw., sergeant-at-arms, and John A. Rees of Falls Church, Va., historian.

Grant Given University

Because a "critical shortage exists in the supply of medical technologists" the American University has been given a grant by the Kellogg Foundation which will be used for scholarships and loans to students in their pre-clinical semesters.

Prof. Earl A. Dennis, chairman of the Department of Biology and Director of Nurses Training, has been appointed to administer the grant, according to President Paul F. Douglas, of the university.

$787 Taken From Safe

Theft of $787.36 in cash, $3.75 in war saving stamps and a quantity of non-negotiable drafts from a safe at the Western Union office, 3007 14th st. nw., was reported to police yesterday.

Charles A. Gable of Silver Spring, Md., discovered the loss at 7 a. m. He was assured by all employes that the safe was locked the night before. The robbery, it was decided, was done by some one with a duplicate key and the safe's combination.

Tax Offices Will Assist With Returns

Staffs Are Ready To Make Filing of Forms Due Sept. 15 'Easy for Taxpayer'

Local collectors' offices are staffed to clear up "some misunderstandings concerning the September 15 'pay-as-you-go' tax declaration," called "unavoidable" yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Following a Gallup poll disclosure two days ago that 82 per cent of the American people are in favor of the new tax arrangement, Morgenthau declared that "everything possible within the provisions of the 1943 tax bill is being done to make it easier for the taxpayer."

"Changing the tax-paying habits of nearly 50 million people," he said, "cannot be expected to be completed without some difficulty."

The simplified tax form, which a limited group of taxpayers will have to file September 15, has been provided; Morgenthau said, to save them extra calculations which must be made, anyway, in March, 1944.

Any underpayment or overpayment, he emphasized, will be adjusted at the end of the tax year.

"The reason for the September 15 declaration is to put everyone on a 'pay-as-you-go' basis," the Treasury statement said. "People whose taxes are being withheld by employers and are making no more than $2700, if single ($3500, married), are automatically kept on a current basis.

"The present declaration will take care of those whose taxes are not withheld or whose incomes exceed those limits."

Clearing up another "cause of worry," Secretary Morgenthau said the penalty clause on the September 15 forms, as provided by law, "applies to the year's taxes, not just this form."

Any error made on this declaration can therefore be corrected by simply filing an amended declaration on or before December 15, he added.

Center to Train Disabled for Postwar Work

War-disabled persons are already being assisted by Goodwill Industries of Washington, Acting Director Charles Priest said yesterday, and the organization, which trains disabled persons to help themselves, now is making plans for expansion after the war.

The organization now is helping some of those too badly injured in industrial accidents for the Government to reemploy, and after the war it expects to be in a position to offer superior facilities to those scarred on the battle-front as well, Priest said. Mental shock cases as well as those physically handicapped will be helped, he added.

Meanwhile, the organization now is employing 75 to 80 persons a week at wages ranging from 35 to 57½ cents an hour, on jobs of upholstering, dry cleaning, shoe repairing, tailoring, cabinet making, etc., for which workers receive training. Most workers considered unemployable when they come to Goodwill become employable through their work, Priest said, pointing out the turnover of those leaving for regular jobs was 130 per cent last year.

Materials for repair are collected in large paper bags from local householders, and since discontinuation of the self-help program last June, Goodwill also has been collecting their bags, Priest said.

Self-Help Exchange operated under a similar plan for needy persons, not handicapped, who exchanged services for goods and training. Its funds are being held in escrow until the employment situation is such its services again are needed, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, executive secretary, said yesterday.

McCloy 'Unknown' At Pentagon

Even the telegraph companies have trouble finding their way about the War Department's huge Pentagon Building.

John J. McCloy, Acting Secretary of War, told yesterday of a telegram being returned to the sender with this notation:

"Message sent to John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, Pentagon Building, is undelivered, he is unknown."

Rabid Squirrel Bites Two

Mrs. Lucy Patazian and her granddaughter, Seda Kanaldjian of 1454 Clifton st. nw., were given Pasteur treatments yesterday after it was found that a squirrel that bit them was rabid.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting health officer, and Dr. C. C. Dauer, entomologist, warned children not to play with squirrels in the parks and streets and that parents should note the conduct of the animals.

Health Check Urged Before Schools Open

Special Service For Handicapped To Be Provided First Time This Fall

Special health examinations for seriously handicapped school children will be provided in the fall for the first time by the Health Department, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting health officer, announced yesterday. At the same time he issued a plea that parents of school children have them examined by the family physician before the opening of the school year, Monday, September 20.

He warned parents because of fewer doctors in the community the checkups should be done without delay. Defective vision, bad teeth, and other physical defects should be attended to immediately to prevent the child from being handicapped in its school work, he said.

A warning was also issued to newcomers here that smallpox vaccination is compulsory for all pupils entering District schools. He urged immunization against diphtheria. He pointed out in cases where parents are unable to pay for this service the Health Department offers it without charge at the vaccination clinic, 469 C st. nw., Saturdays at 9:30 a. m.

Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of the Health Department's Bureau of School Medical Inspection, said parents who are contemplating school entrance of children suffering from crippling conditions and seriously defective hearing and vision, should make arrangements for a special medical examination with the bureau.

After the examination is complete the Health Department will make recommendations concerning special placement in classes for crippled children, or classes for conservation of vision or for hearing and lip reading which are conducted by the Board of Education.

Increased facilities for this type of treatment, obtained during the past year, make it possible for the department to announce the inauguration of the service.

Child Center Accepted

The District government yesterday formally accepted the recently completed Child Care Center, located in seven houses on D st. se., between Third and Fourth sts., and in two houses on North Carolina ave. se., which is adjacent.

The capacity for the center is 80 children of working mothers, of pre-school age, and 30 of school age. At the present 15 children are being cared for in a section of the center which was opened August 23.

The work of preparing the structures for their present purpose was done with a $30,000 FWA grant, which was also used for the purchase of equipment. An additional $13,000 of Lanham Act funds will be used for operating expenses.

A fee ranging from $2 to $28 will be charged the children in cases where they can afford to pay. However, where it is shown the fee cannot be paid, the children will be admitted without cost.

Child Care Offered Chevy Chase Donors

A child care service is offered for Chevy Chase, Md., citizens who want to donate their blood when the mobile unit visits the Chevy Chase Women's Clubhouse, Wednesday, September 8, from 8:45 a. m. to 1 p. m. The quota has been set for 150 pints.

While mothers are giving their blood their children will be taken care of by Mrs. S. A. Towne, assisted by members of Girl Scout Troop 221 and Boy Scout 225.

Appointments of donors are requested to be made with Mrs. Frank Ayer, 7112 Curtis st., Oliver 1879, or Mrs. Roger Whiteford, 101 Leland st., Wisconsin 4041.

Heads Section In Fund Drive

WILLIAM L. BATT,
who will be in charge of the forthcoming Community War Fund Campaign among employes of the War Production Board

Writer Tells Of Horrors in Jap Camps

Two thousand employes of the Hecht Co. department store, listened attentively yesterday as Richard C. Wilson, former United States Press Bureau Chief in Manila, gave a vivid, personal experience account of horrors in a Japanese internment camp.

Wilson spoke as a guest at a Hecht Co. bond rally to start employes off on a concerted effort to sell more than $400,000 in war bonds in the Third War Loan drive.

"The quicker we win each battle the better chance we have of winning the whole war against the Japs," Wilson declared. He said that Japanese are strongly entrenched and are banking on a long drawn out war.

"For months we lived on rice alone," Wilson told the Hecht workers. He said that Japanese believe that the United Nations would be weakened by a war of several years duration, and that the Japs, expect to secure their conquests through a military stalemate.

The Hecht Co. group, in previous drives well above their quotas, are determined to add laurels to the company's record in the pending loan campaign.

John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, was introduced by Bert M. Sarazan, Hecht Company publicity director, and said:

"The war is costing America 10 million dollars an hour. By night all the money raised through purchase of bonds by Washingtonians during the Third War Loan drive will have been spent."

Following the rally the Hecht employes pledged themselves to all-out effort in making a success of the store's part in the Third War Loan campaign.

Injuries Suffered In Traffic Mishap Claim D. C. Man

D. C. traffic deaths this year ... 56
Deaths this date last year ..... 70
District total last year .....108

Struck by a streetcar Wednesday, Clarence A. Storke, 72, 630 I st. ne., died at Casualty Hospital yesterday, the fifty-sixth traffic fatality this year.

The accident occurred in the 1800 block Benning rd. ne., while Storke was running across the car tracks, police said. The trolley police said, was operated by Chester K. Bowling, 38, 2812 Olive ave. nw.

Roosevelt To Open War Loan Drive

Radio Address On Wednesday To Precede Show Of Hollywood Stars

The third war load drive for 15 billion dollars will be opened Wednesday night with a short radio address by President Roosevelt that will highlight a one-hour, 20 million dollar Hollywood show of the Nation's top-flight entertainers, broadcast Nationwide at 9 p. m. and relayed to overseas stations by the OWI.

The announcement of the President's address and the radio show, in which Hollywood actors and actresses, having total salaries estimated at 20 million dollars, will present a series of sketches on the most memorable stages of the war, was made yesterday simultaneously at Secretary Henry Morgenthau's press conference and by Stephen Early, White House secretary.

Expected to be heard by more than 70 million people, the broadcast will open "the largest money raising campaign in the history of the world," in which Washington is called upon to raise 94 million dollars.

Tuning the whole program to the invasion theme, which is also indicated in the loan drive's slogan "Back the Attack," Theodore R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Division, said that the President is expected "to call for a rededication of America to the war aims of the United Nations and for maximum sacrifice to hasten an early and decisive victory."

Gayer Note to Appear

"In anticipation of an imminent invasion of the European continent and the relentless pursuit of the Japanese aggressors from the South Pacific," the Treasury's statement said, "the Hollywood program will also carry a gayer note, reflecting the battle songs of the services."

Switching the broadcast from Hollywood to Washington, Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, will then introduce Mr. Roosevelt. James Cagney, president of the Screen Actors Guild, will place the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade and all the resources of the motion picture industry at the disposal of Secretary Morgenthau, it was stated.

Cagney will be with the President during the broadcast and with him will be members of the cavalcade, including Greer Garson, Judy Garland, Lucille Ball, Olivia De-Haviland, Mickey Rooney, Dick Powell, Walter Pidgeon, Harpo Marx, and Jose Iturbi.

Stars to Tour Country

Leaving Washington after the broadcast, the film group will tour the country and present bond shows in 14 cities throughout the Nation between September 9 and 24.

When a reporter at yesterday's press conference with Secretary Morgenthau remarked that it all reminded him of "Liberty Loan days," Morgenthau smiled and added: ". . . and some."

As an indication of the enthusiasm and "100 per cent cooperation he has found among business organizations, labor and private citizens," the Secretary cited as an example Indiana, which will be blacked out all night September 8 and will open the loan drive Thursday morning by placing the entire State "on alert" and calling the population out by "everything that can be tooted or rung."

Reilly Names Fowler

Washington's campaign to raise its quota of 94 million dollars was pushed ahead, in the meantime, when John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee, yesterday announced the appointment of Walter F. Fowler, District budget director, as chairman of the District Emloyes Division of the Third War Loan campaign.

Fowler, a native of Washington, has been with the District government since 1917, holding his present position since 1941. After graduating from Georgetown University, he was admitted to the local bar 26 years ago. He has served in various capacities in the District government and is a member of the Board of Trade.

Man Gives Blood to Red Cross 17th Time, Prefers Anonymity

A middle-aged man yesterday walked into the Red Cross Blood Donor Center, 51 Indiana ave. nw., to give his blood for the seventeenth time, so that American boys who lie wounded on the battlefields of war may have a chance to live and return some day to the country and homes for which they fight.

This man remains anonymous. He is one of those who give without glory or recognition. And yesterday he quietly requested the center not to give him any publicity, as the only purpose of his act was to do what he could to win the war, in common with millions of other Americans.

There were hundreds of other unsung donors at the Center yesterday, just as there will be today and every day until the blood shed by our servicemen for the cause of humanity and decency ceases to flow.

Thirty employes of the Bureau of Aeronautics came to donate their blood, although only 15 originally comprised this group.

The House of Representatives sent another 30, although only 10 persons are scheduled to show up every Thursday.

Instead of the 15 employes at the Bureau of Internal Revenue who signed up for donations, 25 appeared yesterday.

The Bureau of Ships was represented by 35 donors, the Bureau of Standards by 20 more, the Office of Economic Warfare by 20, and the District Building sent 20 volunteers.

These are the people of Washington who each day, and over and over again, give the blood which they can spare without ill effect and which has saved untold thousands of men who might have died otherwise.

The Washington Chapter of Red Cross needs 500 donations every day. It takes little time and no discomfort to give the precious fluid. Appointments can be made by phoning District 3300.

Those who once come, return again and again, realizing that for so little inconvenience they are saving a life and perserving an ideal.

Aerial Gunner From Calverton Killed in Action

Word has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Brown, that Sergt. Thomas Manly Brown, 20 of Calverton, Va., was killed in action July 25. He had formerly been reported missing in action.

Sergeant Brown enlisted in the Air Corps December 7, 1942, and served as an aerial gunner on a plane operating from a base in England.

Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother, James Brown and three sisters, Lucille Brown and Nancy Brown, all of Calverton, and Mrs. James Naylor of Baltimore, Md.

City News In Brief

Police Band to Play

The Metropolitan Police Department Band will present a "Commissioners' Concert" in front of the District Building tomorrow at 7 p. m. Popular music and pieces by Sousa will be included. If the public approves, the band under the leadership of Lieut. Charles Benter will present additional concerts.

Safety Code Approved

District construction and labor leaders yesterday "approved with minor exceptions" a proposed construction safety code announced by a committee of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board.

The proposed code was offered at a public hearing at the Municipal Center Building. C. W. Humphries of Master Builders Association and A. R. Dodd of the Board of Trade both asked for an extention of time in which to review the 69-page code. Approval was voted by William Arnheim and John Locker, Washington Central Labor Union; W. T. Cameron, safety adviser for the Department of Labor; M. R. Stevens, Plasterers and Cement Finishers Union, and numerous others.

College Women Face Realities of War, Peace

By Genevieve Reynolds

War has produced a sobering effect upon college women. Generally they take their work more seriously. Many a would-be flitter-wit is tackling her books with increasing earnestness, observes Mrs. Harry H. Powers of Austin, Tex., newly elected national president of Alpha Chi Omega Fraternity.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Mrs. Harry H. Powers.

"Not only are the girls sudying more but are becoming more and more active in student activities," she said. "This is proved by the increasing number of Mortarboard members. At least this is the case among Alpha Chi Omegas throughout the country."

In town this week to map out a war program with the local active chapters, Beta Rho at American University and Alpha Psi Alpha, Washington alumnae group, Mrs. Powers will be honor guest at a buffet dinner tonight at the Kennedy-Warren. Sharing honors with Mrs. Powers will be Mrs. William Cravens of Edgemore, new national treasurer of the sorority. Receiving with the honored guests will be Miss Mildred Anderson, president of Beta Rho active chapter; Mrs. Charles Gale of Takoma Park, State alumnae chairman; Mrs. Leon Hugh Warre, president of the alumnae chapter; Ensign Elizabeth Budd, formerly national publications chairman, now in the WAVES, and Mrs. Vincent Carrels.

Full of Enthusiasm

Interviewed in her suite at the Statler Hotel yesterday, Mrs. Powers was full of plans and enthusiasm for the fraternity's latest war project. Recently, Alpha Chi Omega opened a nursery school in the crowded factory areas of Detroit. Working with the State Board of Education, members were granted the use of a Sunday school room. Local fraternity members bought the equipment and take care of the upkeep. Not to confuse the people, the original name of the "Cass Community Center" was retained for the nursery.

"My fraternity always has been interested in children," she explained. "During World War I we adopted many French refugee children whom we cared for during and long after the war. Before Pearl Harbor, Alpha Chi Omega gave $2500 to equip a hostel for bombed out British children in England."

On Survey Tour

Now Mrs. Powers is on a tour to survey the needs for nurseries in various war factory centers. She expects to encourage alumnae groups in the various centers to set up nursery centers where needed. Also, she is urging the active and alumnae members to serve as nurse's aides, USO hostesses, etc.

Out in Austin, Tex., where there are many Latin-American students, Mrs. Powers is working with the local Alpha Chi groups to set up a recreational center that will be a drawing card for both the North and Latin-American groups. At the same time, the national organization is working on an Inter-Americ holarship plan for stud from North and Central An. .ca.

When she isn't on tour, you'll find Mrs. Powers selling bonds and serving as a senior USO hostess. A native of Colorado, she received a degree in geology from the University of Colorado. After a stint with the U. S. Geological Survey in the District of Columbia, she went with the Gulf Oil Co. in Pittsburgh. Then she married a petroleum engineer, who now is head of the department of petroleum engineering, University of Texas.

Asked what her hobbies are, she replied, "Alpha Chi Omega." Reserved and modest, pleasant, soft spoken, Mrs. Powers admitted that she likes facts and figures. Before taking over the national presidency she served as national treasurer.

Rah! Rah! Phase Out

That the "good old college days" phase of campus life is out for the duration was the conclusion reached by National Greek letter society executives who met here recently in a conference called by President Paul F. Douglass of American University.

Necessity for student participation in educational, social and recreational activities which will prepare them for roles in a "responsible free world" was recognized in their findings, Dr. Douglass said yesterday in releasing their report.

Greek letter societies should form a united front in facing the unusually serious mission of meeting their wartime responsibilities, the leaders representing five of the organizations declared.

The presence of more than 4000 men and women in the armed forces, who are either on or adjacent to the American University campus, greatly magnifies the need, according to Dr. Douglass.

"Many are fraternity and sorority members from other institutions," he stated, "and there are numerous others who can benefit from social and recreational programs which can be promoted by the well organized groups represented in Greek letter societies."

Still other problems which students must prepare to meet include helping men with service-incurred disabilities back to college life, and facilitating the return to college campuses of men and women who will some day be demobilized, it was brought out by the conferees.

"We believe that the American University is facing the greatest opportunity for service in its history," reads the declaration of faith adopted by the national Greek letter representatives who took part in the conference.

"In abnormal times like these, maintenance of normal college activity is in itself a terrific challenge to the vision and resourcefulness of the administration and students. In the case of the American University this problem is augmented by a situation which fortunately enables the college to continue as a wholly civilian institution while surrounded by military, naval, and Red Cross wartime units. The presence of this neighborhood of wartime personnel presents a vital need for additional recreational and social outlets which the college must provide.

"The college should now, moreover, make plans and preparations for returning service men and women, and for civilians accustomed to wartime living, so that they may be aided in their adjustment to normal life."

"We believe that fraternities are one valuable medium for the achievement of these goals," the declaration formulated by the Greek letter representatives continued.

"Organized for group activity and trained by long years of experience, these fraternal organizations are especially well fitted for this role in a wartime world.

"We believe that fraternities can best utilize their enlarged opportunity for this service through united action, with one another and with the college administration."

Woman Asks Help for Her Loved Daughter-in-Law, Whose Sick Anxiety Over Soldier Husband's Peril Makes Her Cruelly Impatient With Her Small Sons

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I love my daughter-in-law and she loves me. I think she would take advice from me, within reason,—probably because I have always given it sparingly and only when asked for it. At present, she is not well. She is underweight and nervous, due in great measure to anxiety over her husband, who is in the service, and in action in the zone from which casualties come.

She has two little boys, one 5 years of age and the other not quite 3. It is in regard to the children that I am seeking help. My daughter-in-law is so impatient, so discourteous, so unfair, and often so cruel in her treatment of the children that at times I can scarcely bear to witness their unhappiness. Another matter that troubles me is the fact that she is extremely partial to the elder child, kissing him and petting him; but impatiently rejecting the baby's affectionate advances.

The younger boy is often punished severely, when it seems to me the elder boy is equally or more to blame,—if, indeed, either can be said to be "to blame" for a natural outburst of childish high spirits. More often than not, my daughter-in-law's impatience erupts at table. For instance, the younger boy, in lifting his glass back to the table, placed it too near the edge. It fell and was smashed. The child was snatched from his chair, severely slapped and sent to bed without his supper. Now, Miss Haworth, you can see from this incident that I am not just a doting, officious grandmother who ought to mind her own business. My daughter-in-law herself would be the last person to make such a charge. But you know and I know that such treatment of children can cause profound and permanent psychological disturbances.

How can I tactfully warn my daughter-in-law that she is inflicting wounds to the spirit, from which she and the children may suffer deeply in years to come? Can you suggest one or two books that I can give her to read? I would like something scientifically sound, but readable. I am afraid she wouldn't wade through any dry-as-dust tomes. GRANDMA.

Sermon for Mothers In British Experience

DEAR GRANDMA: In truth, I must say that I personally do not have a "reading knowledge" of any book that I could positively recommend for your daughter-in-law. Furthermore, I have just talked with a staff member of the Child Guidance Clinic of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, at 1464 Columbia road nw., telephone Adams 1033,—who likewise is unable to "prescribe" any book to meet the precise purpose you have in mind. However, she did call attention to a recent work, "War and Children," authored by Anna Freud (daughter of the great Viennese psychiatrist) and Dorothy Burlingham, based on their experiences and conclusions as child psychologists working with England's "blitzed" children,—which treats in part (so she says) with the paramount psychological value to the child of a satisfactory close association with parents (or at least one parent) during the serious social disturbances occasioned by war.

This book, she says, is rich in "stories from life,"—stories illustrating the effects upon children, for good or ill, of substantially reassuring adult association or the lack thereof. And it occurs to me that this volume might possibly "help" your daughter-in-law,—at least to the extent of acquainting her with the truths that (1) children in war are susceptible to the same severe nervous stresses which try adult souls; (2) that these stresses on children (often unsuspected by parents) can be dangerously accentuated by daily exposure to a distrait parent's undisciplined display of acute anxiety concerning matters presumably unfelt by the child; and (3) that she has, therefore, a special responsibility to her children (a responsibility which mounts in proportion to their father's danger), plus an enviable opportunity (compared to that of the typical labor-drafted British mother) in her status as a home-staying mother, to give them the psychological bulwark and continuous benefit of a serene, kindly, patient and high hearted brand of daily care,—which is a far cry from her "screaming meemies" performance up to now.

Baltimore Specialist Strikes Golden Mean

Lest she tend, however,—in the event of reading the above named book,—to go to the opposite extreme of trying to be an "angel mother," behaving with exaggerated gallantry impossible to sustain, she might balance the account of "blitzed child life" in Britain by reading Dr. Leo Kanner's new book, "In Defense of Mothers." Dr. Kanner, who is head of the children's psychiatric clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital, herein espouses the doctrine that mothers are human beings, after all; and subject to all those frailties of temperament common to humanity;—and that it is, therefore, unreasonable and out of line with nature to ask them to be, or to condemn them for not being, flawlessly wise and gracious in tending their young.

In process of digesting these two viewpoints,—the one, a grave challenge to war-time mothers to consciously shelter the spirits of their young; and the other, a sensible reminder to mothers to philosophically recognize their human limitations and to rest content with doing their best in the circumstances,—it is possible that your daughter-in-law will "find herself" in relation to her manifold burdens, and dedicate herself wholeheartedly to the eminently feasible, urgently important and incalculably profitable task of practicing thoughtful self control, for the children's sake. Also, it occurs to me that these two books, given to her as a gift from you, might, by their counter-balancing contents, most tactfully convey your sympathy with both sides alike.

Daughter-in-Law Needs Skilled Medical Help

One last thought: Your description of your daughter-in-law, as being "not well, underweight and nervously irritable," gives a picture of symptoms suggesting a hyper-thyroid condition, which calls for treatment by a skilled endocrinologist. Chronic worry may induce this condition, which, once established, proceeds to intensify the precipitating mental morbidity,—so that you have a vicious circle of mounting nervous tension. This high strung condition can be greatly relieved by modern medication,—and it is your daughter-in-law's duty to obtain such care. Then, too, she may need a doctor's advice on how to accommodate herself, psychologically, to her husband's absence,—since there is a possibility that emotional repression, neither frankly faced nor intelligently managed, may be responsible in large measure for her latter-day chronic jitters. # Don't Be a Letter Bore

By Grace Martin
AP Features Writer

How is your correspondence doing in the midst of all your wartime responsibilities?

Are you putting your letters off until the last minute and then scrambling through them any way you can?

Or, worse still, are you failing to write them at all?

Perhaps you manage to get them done, but you write in such haste that your handwriting is almost illegible. Or you give them no real thought and fill them full of dullness. Or you write a letter whose appearance is really a disgrace.

Then this is the day for you to remember that your letters represent you—and a slovenly, tardy or dull letter is scarcely the ambassador you would choose.

If writing seems to be one of those things you can't find time for in wartime, you might take a tip from a New York war wife who has two small children and a job. She fits a special pad of notepaper and a fountain pen into her bag. While she waits for appointments or waits for trains she writes a few lines. Using that system, she says she averages three or more letters a week.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Lowbrow Cult

Political and radio hillbillies who consciously murder the language to impress their audiences were recently cited in this column as public menaces. Now correspondents have rallied to the cause suggesting other depressing examples of the general veneration of ignorance. Among them are the complacent bad grammarians, the perpetual wisecrackers, and the boastful lowbrows.

One young woman tells of her disappointment in Washington speech. Reared in a home in which good English was spoken, read and revered, she had looked forward to finding in the Capital a high level of conversation. She writes:

"It seemed to me when I came to Washington two years ago that this city, wonderful to me then, not quite so wonderful now, would be peopled by those who speak impeccable English. I don't know why I thought that except that I believed that the seat of Government of the United States, the greatest to me then, not quite so wonderful now, would have highly educated people working in it, and that those people would know how to express themselves properly.

Bad Grammar In the Capital

"As you know and I know, this is not the case. Oh, there are some who do, but they are in the minority, and are careful that no one finds out about it. One needs only to listen to conversations in the street cars, the buses, anywhere that people congregate, to discover them."

Of the rapidly spreading affliction of wisecracking, the blame for which is put squarely on the shoulders of men, another correspondent writes:

"Why, oh why, do so many young men between 25 and 40 wish to remain adolescent? (This age particularly is coming to my notice because my daughter is a canteen hostess.) I am not critical of lovable boyish traits which men, however mature, are unconscious of. These, women love. I am criticising adolescent mannerisms and speech, the men who love to turn everything one says into a joke. How much more interesting and understanding such men would be if they used their quick minds to think of some incident out of their reading or experience relative to the discussion. Is it an aftermath of all the gibberish learned in high school and college—as "being in a groove" and "what's cookin'?" With all the beautiful words we might learn it seems just a little primitive to me that we should replace the English language with such gibberish.

"Must it be left to newspapers to educate youth to the thrill of just being alive? Yet if parents and teachers cannot teach them who can?

Enjoy Only Their Own Wisecracks

My daughter suggests seeing an art gallery. "Oh, I went there last year,' is the answer. Isn't this having one's body walking around, but one's mind dead? It isn't just museums. Garden spots and beautiful architecture are equally boring. These young men can't ride horseback or paddle a canoe, yet they loathe walking. They can sit and drink and watch a show or listen to themselves wisecrack, but anything that thrills the soul or is food for it seems to be out. Yet these are the men who will help perpetuate the race, who will help the world grow more humane and godlike."

Still another example along these lines is cited—the mental Uriah Heep, the person who is always insisting that he knows nothing about art, music, literature—and even worse, alas, grammar and economics—and subtly insinuating that he is better than those who do. A man correspondent writes.

"Hillbilly talk is popular, incorrect English is generally spoken and so-called highbrows ridiculed because as a Nation we are too young to respect the scholar. We have inherited a suspicion of learning from our frontier experience. Also we have a false sense of democracy which makes us seek to curry favor with the mob. Out of this has grown the braggart lowbrow, most obnoxious of all ignoramuses and which unfortunately seems largely a product of my own sex."

Many interesting questions have been raised by these correspondents. Some of them will be considered in later columns.

It's The Cutting That Counts

By Margaret George

Taking care of one's hair is a serious business to most women. Even if gag-writers have poked fun at that old familiar plaint, "I can't do a thing with it!" (Did you ever hear this one: "I just washed my feet and can't do a thing with them?")

Her hair is naturally curly and shouldn't be a problem. But it's badly in need of proper shaping via the scissors

But it's no joke. Not when you work six days a week and don't have the leisure (or the money) to become a salon habitue. That's why we decided to try and find the best answer we could to this perennial problem.

We think it's pretty well summed up by one of Washington's well-known hair stylists: "If hair is correctly cut, a woman can set it herself and can manage a variety of hair-do's."

That's the key to a great many troubled heads. And we're not just talking about women with short hair. Even longer hair needs shaping and molding via the shears as a foundation for a becoming hair style.

It happens that the girl in the picture has naturally curly hair, but proper cutting is just as important, if not more so, for permanented hair. A word of caution from this same hair-dresser re permanents: "Never get a too tight one, thinking that it'll last longer. It won't, and it will never prove as manageable as a too soft permanent."

And, because the shaping is so important, it's not a project for the average barber. It should be done by a hair specialist who can tell you what is right for your face and your hair. The stylist we talked to got his degree curling the hair on wigs worn by English judges a score of years ago. He styled hair in London, France, Belgium, Germany, before he came to this country. We give you this slight background to explain the reason for the confidence this man inspires when he sets to work on your hair. He knows his business and that's that.

Here's the same head of hair after a session with the stylist. It's been thinned and molded, and she'll be able to keep it looking this way

The secret of hair styling for various kinds of faces isn't complicated. The oval outline is the ideal, and hair is shaped with an eye toward simulating an oval. "Take a Reuben's picture," he says. "It looks bad with a tiny frame. Similarly, a large face must have a heavier frame."

And the kind of frame he gives your face will have its base in what he does with those shears which he wields like an artist. But a very practical artist who appreciates your problem.

The picture he offers you won't be beautiful for just one evening. Like the girl in the photograph, you should be able to handle your hair yourself once it's been properly shaped.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

It is natural that young mothers should be the helpless target of unasked-for advice. Every woman who has ever had a child, no matter what her experience, feels herself to be an expert on child-rearing. She is all too anxious to pass on the bounties of her information.

"I'm going to have a baby in October," one such young mother writes. "I am simply dizzy being told what and what not to do. One mother says a winter baby can't be taken out of doors and must get its sunshine from vitamin D. Another told me she had taken her baby out every nice day, and it never had a cold all winter.

"One mother advises me to nurse my baby for nine months; another says don't even start it, bottle formulas are so satisfactory. My aunt—with grown children—says a baby will get a rupture unless it wears a band until it can sit alone; one of my friends just laughed and said her baby never had one on after she came from the hospital.

"This is all terribly confusing to me, Mrs. Eldred, and I worry all the time for fear, in my ignorance, I'll do something to harm my baby."

Your emotion is typical. Every mother worries about that. There seems to be so very, very much to learn and so many dangers to be avoided that any mother feels herself incapable of absorbing so much knowledge and avoiding all the mistakes possible to make.

Begin today to read authoritative books on baby care. When your neighbors or friends give advice, say, "Thank you, I'll remember that." If it's good advice, you'll find the same thing repeated in most reputable literature.

Give yourself confidence by reading good books and add to your library as your baby grows. To ease your mind about these mentioned controversies, here is the present-day consensus about them.

Six weeks after baby is born, begin a daily airing of 15 minutes or so and continue every nice day, gradually increasing the time. Avoid days when the temperature is zero or under. Give cod liver oil or some other vitamin D consistently from the fourth to sixth week on.

The binder has just one value; it holds the naval dressing in place and comes off when that does.

Nursing the baby is a dear and precious privilege to be performed as long as it profits the baby and no longer. Be glad then that bottle formulas are as fine as they are.

My leaflet, "Rickets and the Anti-Rachitics," will help mothers to understand the value of vitamin D during the growth years. You may have it by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

Isn't it lucky that the exercises that keep you feeling fittest are the ones that do the most for your figure? These are the exercises that firm the midsection.

There are several reasons the bands of muscles through the midriff are so important. They comprise your own natural girdle—which isn't just for looks! Toning this group improves the circulation and makes your entire system function more efficiently.

The worst thing that can happen to your figure is to let these muscles go flabby and take on fat. That gives you the middle-aged spread.

If you are very much overweight, of course, you will have to stop overeating to lose the fat amidships. Smaller meals are in order. If you will make it a strict rule to leave the table before you reach the too-full stage, you will be well on your way to streamlines. This doesn't necessarily mean dieting. But it does mean that you can't overeat. Then, you must cut down on the amount of liquid with the meals. Some of the movie stars who are determined to keep streamlined never take more than one-half glass of liquid with their meals. That goes for water, beverage, soup, or anything to drink. You can drink all the water you please between meals.

But to restore tone to the overstretched muscles, you have to exercise. Your program can be effective without being strenuous. For example, you can lie face down on the floor and simply rock back and forth. Stretch your arms and legs, raise them slightly off the floor, and rock. Or, spread your arms straight out at the sides, shoulder level, legs straight down, and rock from side to side.

One of the best exercises you can do is just about the easiest. Lie on your back on the floor with feet elevated to a footstool or low chair, knees straight. From there, swing the right leg up to form a right angle at the hips, hold, lower.

From that same position, arms stretched out at sides shoulder level, swing alternate legs up to right angles, cross over, and touch toes to fingers. Or, simply flex knees to chest.

For a flat and firm front line, lie on the floor, face down, and stretch arms and legs upward, hold, and lower. Another stunt is to get in the same position, arms at sides on line with shoulder, and rock from side to side.

Should the United States Draft Its Womanpower?

Some Feminine Leaders Give Their Reactions To the Question; Are Definite Either Pro or Con

By Adelaide Kerr
Associated Press Features Writer

Should American women be drafted?

That question has been discussed from coast to coast since England conscripted her women.

Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, head of Barnard College, Columbia University, gave the discussion new impetus soon after her return from a six weeks' visit in England, when she advocated the drafting of women for the armed services or for any work essential to the war effort.

"I am inclined to think that we shall have to come to the drafting of women in America," she told me. "I had opportunity to observe how it was working in England and I saw that because they had conscripted women, they had control of the situation. When women were needed in the military services or in industry they were able to direct them there."

Dean Gildersleeve

England began the registration of her 20-year-old women in 1941 and eventually registered all women between the ages of 18 and 45 (8,670,000). All the registrants were called to local government agencies for interviews and given a list of the types of work for which women were needed. If they failed to choose one of them, they were then directed into industry. In December, 1941, the British Parliament passed the National Service Act, which enabled the government to draft all women. So far the government has conscripted only unmarried women from 19 to 30 and has actually called up only those from 19 to 24. They were given a choice between entering the military forces, civil defense or specified jobs in industry.

Many American women favor the drafting of women—particularly young women—for military and industrial service. Among them is Dr. Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Dr. Phillips

"I think we should all be registered," she said recently, when I asked for her opinion on the subject. "We take men. There is no reason why we should not take women. That is war and you have to have organized effort. And that's the way to get it."

Other women favor conscripting women on the ground that there is a large class of leisure women — chiefly housewives — who are taking no regular part in the war effort. They believe this class would yield a great deal of help to the war effort under conscription.

Miss Bloodworth

However, some of the country's leading women are less inclined to approve the drafting of their sex for war service.

"I question it now," said Miss Bess Bloodworth, vice president in charge of personnel at Namm's Department Store, Brooklyn, N. Y., and a member of the women's advisory committe of the War Manpower Commission.

"I was in favor of a national service act for men and women at the beginning of the war," Miss Bloodworth continued in reply to my question. "I would have been in favor of it even until the first part of this year. But in our present state there is a question in my mind whether the drafting of women would not cause more confusion and less orderly procedure than now. I think it all depends on what the actual facts are concerning our labor shortage throughout the country, on what our production is and should be and whether such a step is necessary at present. I'm not in a position to decide that."

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, daughter of William Jennings Bryan and America's first woman envoy to a foreign country, expressed a third point of view which many women share when she said:

Mrs. Rohde

"If and when it seems necessary or advisable for our Government to draft women, I feel about it just as I felt about the drafting of men," she told me. "It's a measure that the Government doesn't adopt unless it is considered necessary. And when it is necessary in the opinion of my Government, I accept it without any comment whatsoever. The condition which would make the drafting of women advisable and necessary would of course have to be determined by the officials of government, who have a scope and viewpoint which the civilian citizen cannot possibly have."

Miss Sabalot Is Wed to Navy Ensign

En route to San Francisco are Ensign Henry Saunders Barbour, USN, and his bride, the former Miss Nancy Bagby Sabalot.

The couple were married Saturday afternoon at the Naval Academy Chapel in Annapolis with Capt. William N. Thomas, chaplain of the academy, officiating. The bride is the daughter of Capt. Charles Jules Sabalot, USN, and Mrs. Sabalot. Ensign Barbour is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sterling Barbour of Holly Bluff, Mass.

Capt. Samuel Hurt gave the bride in marriage. She had Miss Patricia Walker, daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. Harold E. Walker of Miami, as maid of honor and Mrs. Glen I. Dumas as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Suzanna Tillson, Mrs. Elwood Tillson, Mrs. Early P. Yates, Miss Barbara Wright and Miss Emily Berry.

Serving as best man was Ensign Glen I. Dumas, classmate of the bridegroom, and ushering were Ensigns Paul Miller, Earl P. Yates, Harold J. Smith, Joseph A. Grace, John Heintz and William Patterson. All were members of the 1944 graduating class at Annapolis.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, Joseph Wells, jr., USNR, has returned to his station at Bainbridge, Md., and his bride, the former Miss Harriet Ann Page, is making her home in Washington, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wells.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Page of Glenns Falls, N. Y. The couple were married recently at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, with the Rev. R. A. Kessler officiating.

Given in marriage by Charles Murray, the bride was attired in a suit of aquamarine crepe with wine red hat and accessories and wore a shoulder corsage of orchids. She was attended by Miss Jean E. Page, who wore a costume of gray crepe and a corsage of gardenias. Houston McCeney served as best man and ushering were Wyatt McCeney and John Murray.

A reception followed in the Jefferson Room at the Mayflower. The bridegroom was a student at Georgetown University before entering the Navy.

Engagement Told In Manhattan

Mrs. Henry B. de Villiers-Schwab of New York, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Cornelia de Villiers-Schwab, to W. Thomas McMahan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. McMahan of Greenville, S. C.

Miss de Villiers-Schwab is the daughter of the late Henry Baldwin de Villiers-Schwab. Her brothers are Mr. Henry B. de Villiers-Schwab, jr., of Erie, Pa., and Lieut. (j. g.) Winthrow de Villiers-Schwab, USNR. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Schwab of New York and Mrs. Lyman C. Bleecker of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, and she is the grandniece of Miss Emily Schwab of Sharon, Conn. The late Lochner de Villiers of Constantia, South Africa, who married Miss Clara Hussey of Sewickley, Pa., was her uncle. Among her forebears were Lord de Villiers, chief justice of the Union of South Africa and acting governor general at the time of his death; John Winthrop, first Governor of Connecticut, and Henry Baldwin, Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Miss de Villiers-Schwab attended the Brearley School, New York, and was graduated from the Cathedral School of St. Mary, Garden City, Long Island, and the Ballard Secretarial School, New York. During the past year she has studied at Columbia (S. C.) Bible College in preparation for postwar religious work. She made her debut in New York in 1934, after which she spent some time in South Africa and England.

Mr. McMahan was graduated from Columbia Bible College and Furman University, Greenville, S. C. He is a theological student at Faith Seminary, Wilmington, Del.

Mrs. Churchill To Be Entertained

Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the British Prime Minister, and her daughter, Miss Mary Churchill, will be guests of honor at a cocktail party this afternoon to be given by Mrs. Harold Butler, wife of the British Minister.

Chile's Head Of Air Group Feted Here

There was a good deal of gold braid in evidence at the "after 6" party given yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower by Wing Commander Teodoro Ruiz-Diaz. Purpose of the fete was to introduce Group Commander Raul Gonzales-Nolle, recently arrived chief of the air mission for Chile, to some of his coworkers from the United States and Latin-American countries.

Close to 200 guests dropped in during the afternoon to greet Group Commander Gonzales-Nolle, who, like his host, will swell the list of eligible Washington bachelors. The War Department was well represented in the gathering, as were the Navy Department and the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. The Chilean Embassy staff was out in full force and Military, Air and Naval Attaches of the Latin-American embassies were present.

Group Commander Gonzales-Nolle, who took his aviation training in his native country, has seen a great deal of European aviation during his tours of duty in Europe as a member of special air commissions. He was at one time aide-de-camp to the President of Chile, and before coming to Washington he held the important post of Undersecretary of Aviation for Chile.

Stackelbergs Return from Quiet Holiday

Baron and Baroness Stackelberg are back in town after a holiday at their favorite resort—Deep Creek Lake—up in the Cumberland Mountain region.

Like last year, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg leased a cottage on the lake's edge and lived like a pair of campers, the baron taking the role of cook, the baroness serving as kitchen maid. The only blemish on an otherwise perfect vacation spot was prevalence of snakes, which made walking more of an FBI hunt than a health project.

Now that they're back, both are active again in various civic enterprises. Baron Stackelberg, recently named deputy head of the air raid animal rescue services, is on the job, and there is always help needed at the Animal Rescue League in which both the baron and baroness are interested.

Leading spirits in the Sunday-on-the-Soil Volunteers, the Stackelbergs have found since their return that owing to the drought, farm chores have lessened. The baroness reports that there are now more than 300 volunteer workers and more recruits joining up almost every day. Come harvesting time, all will be put to work in this worthwhile war service, giving aid to farmer owners in nearby communities who are suffering a help shortage owing to the war.

Ensign J. H. Hughes Stationed Here

Ensign James H. Hughes 3d, son of former Senator and Mrs. J. H. Hughes of Dover, Del., has reported to Washington for duty, after spending several months stationed at Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Hughes, the former Miss Josephine Waples, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Waples, jr., will visit her parents at their cottage at Rehoboth Beach, Del., and will join Ensign Hughes next week.

Daughter of George S. Kaufman Becomes Bride of Sergeant Booth

The marriage of Miss Anne Kaufman, daughter of George S. Kaufman, New York playwright and theatrical producer, and Mrs. Kaufman, to Sergt. John E. Booth, U. S. Army, took place Wednesday in New York.

Officiating at the ceremony in the Cottage of Hampshire House was the Rev. Philip S. Bernstein, executive director of the committee on Army and Navy religious activities of the Jewish Welfare Board.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Barbara Lovett of Red Bank, N. J., a former classmate at the Holmquist School. Richard E. Booth was best man for his brother. Sergeant Booth attended Lawrenceville School and Columbia University. Before entering the Army he was on the staff of the New York Times.

Launching New War Relief Center

United War Relief Center Opens Doors at New Address

Mrs. Lauchlin Currie and Other Leaders on Hand for First Day

When the United War Relief Center officially opened its new headquarters at 1528 Connecticut ave. on Wednesday afternoon, a number of leaders, including Mrs. Lauchlin Currie, wife of the newly appointed executive director of the Office of Economic Warfare, were on hand to oversee the process of unpacking and settling.

Assisting them were a group of young women, students at American University, who were thus "initiated" into the field of foreign war relief volunteer activities which will be a part of their extracurricular program this autumn.

Mrs. Currie, a member of the board of directors of the Russian War Relief Washington committee, has taken an interest in the establishment of the new center as the jointly occupied headquarters of four foreign war relief organizations. The headquarters, formerly at 1218 Connecticut Avenue, are on the west side of the avenue, one block north of Dupont Circle.

At the Queen Wilhelmina Fund desk were Mme. J. E. Meijer Ranneft, wife of the Netherlands Naval Attache, and Mrs. J. M. W. Koning Hamilton. Mrs. Hamilton was appointed by Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, to take charge of Netherlands relief work during her summer vacation absence. Mme. Loudon expects to resume active participation upon her return later this month.

Plans for the formal opening program and open house at the center, slated for some later date in September or early October, await the return to Washington of Mme. Loudon, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, head of Russian War Relief, and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, all members of the center's executive committee.

Greek War Relief, Russian War Relief, United China Relief and the Queen Wilhelmina Fund are the four foreign war relief organizations located at the headquarters. The main emphasis of their fall programs will be upon the collection of clothing to be held in readiness for the relief of the populations of war-torn nations.

Washingtonians have already donated a total of 50,000 pounds of used clothing which has been sent on Soviet ships for the relief of that war zone's sufferers. The hoped-for liberation of the people of Greece and Holland is acting as a spur to those interested in Greek War Relief and the Queen Wilhelmina Fund to make similar drives for clothing donations. Each of the organizations expects to establish depots where clothing donations can be accepted. Russian War Relief already has one of these depots at 3224 Warder st. nw.

Miss Drexel Selects Date For Wedding

Miss Antonia Marguerita Drexel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. N. Drexel of Haverford, Pa., has selected Saturday, September 25, as the date of her marriage to Lieut. Lawrence W. Earle, son of Comdr. George H. Earle, USNR, assistant Naval Attache of the United States Embassy in Turkey, and Mrs. Earle. Commander Earle is a former Governor of Pennsylvania and onetime American Minister to Bulgaria. The engagement was announced last week.

The ceremony will be performed by Canon Ernest C. Earp at 4:30 in the Church of the Redeemer at Bryn Mawr, Pa. Mrs. Victor L. Drexel will be matron of honor for her sister-in-law, and Miss Doreen Drexel, sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor.

The other attendants will be Miss Polly Mann, Miss Mary Stewart Leas, Miss Rosalie May Gittings and Miss Margaret Coleman, all of Philadelphia; Miss Jill Fitzclarence of Montreal; Miss Woodley Lewis of Newport, R. I.; Miss Jeanne Mary de Villiers Terrage of New York, and Miss Elaine Dominguez of Newport, cousin of the bride-elect.

Squash Suitable To Make Variety Of Good Dishes

It almost takes a botanist to place the many varieties of squash in their proper brackets. This vegetable is really an edible gourd. Some of them so closely resemble cucumbers that one might think they belong to the melon tribe. Even though they are a big puzzling family, yet it is the tenderness of this vegetable which counts when it comes to cookery. Most of the summer kind are ready for cooking when from 6 to 9 days old—as soon as there is substance to them, but while the skin is still easily penetrated with the thumb nail. The ancient and honorable true gardeners use this test, plus the seeds being tender enough to eat.

Squash can come to the table in more ways than served as a vegetable. They make appealing puddings and pies. Since they are of bland flavor, they combine well with other foods, such as onions, tomatoes, rice, macaroni, and many foods that we consider in the "stretcher" class.

Seeds from mature squash may be roasted or fried to make bits to munch. They should be cooked with plenty of salt but they should not be browned. Then they should be cracked when ready to eat.

The kind of squash which resemble cucumbers can be fried and used as a meat substitute dish. Cut them in slivers, roll in flour or corn flakes, then shake off the excess flour or crumbs, and fry in deep fat. Season with salt and cayenne and serve with lemon.

If you want to stuff squash with bits of leftover meat and crumbs, this also makes a meat substitute dish. But try the stuffed kind without meat being used, on your diner menu.

Recipes for preparing squash in several ways and for the Peach Meringue Cake follow:

STUFFED SQUASH

Wash thoroughly four summer squashes, then cut off the stem ends. Steam them covered in a strainer over boiling water until they are tender. Then strain and cool. Scoop out the centers leaving a shall about ½ inch thick. Chop the removed pulp. Add to the pulp ¼ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, minced garlic or onion, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon butter, ¼ cup grated cheese, a few grains of cayenne and ⅛ teaspoon curry powder or dry mustard. Refill the shells. Place them in a pan in a very little water. Bake them in a hot oven (400 degrees) until hot (for about 10 minutes).

Bread crumbs, chopped ham or other cooked meat and ever so many other ingredients may be used in the stuffing.

Once you have served a squash recipe you will be getting "Please, make a squash pie" plea.

SQUASH PIE

To 1 cup cooked squash which has been put through a sieve, add 1 cup cream and ¾ cup either brown or granulated sugar. Beat 3 eggs slightly and add to squash and cream mixture with ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspon salt and ¼ teaspoon mace. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Brush with egg white and sprinkle lightly with bread crumbs. Pour in the squash mixture and bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for 10 minutes to set rim, and then set oven at 325 degrees and bake 30 minutes or until a silver knife inserted in the center of the pie, comes out clean. This pie is delicious spread with honey. And if you want to go to the bother of whipping cream the "war" way, this also makes a grand topping.

Young, tender, yellow squash can be made into a delicious pudding. Then you want to vary your dessert lineup, try the following recipe for making a squash pudding.

SQUASH PUDDING

Wash 4 young yellow squash and slice very thin. Pack into 6 individual casseroles, sprinkling each with flour, salt and pepper. Dot wtih butter or margarine and add 1 tablespon milk or cream to each casserole. Cover and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for 1¼ hours.

SQUASH WITH ONIONS

Wash, peel and seed two summer squashes. Dice them. There should be about 2 cups of diced squash. Melt ¼ cup of butter in a saucepan. Add 1 cup minced onion and saute until it is light brown. Add the squash, 2 teaspoons of salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cover the saucepan. Cook the squash slowly without stirring for 10 minutes, then cook it for 30 minutes stirring it frequently. Serve it sprinkled with paprika.

PEACH MERINGUE CAKE

Cream ¼ cup butter, add ½ cup sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add 1 egg yolk and beat well. Mix and sift 1 cup cake flour, 1¼ teaspoons baking powder, ⅛ teaspoon soda and ¼ teaspoon salt and add to the first mixture alternately with 6 tablespoons buttermilk. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla and fold in 1 stiffly beaten egg white. Pour into a buttered cake pan (about 8 inches square) and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Turn out of pan and allow to cool. Spread with Cream Filling and cover with 1¼ cups sliced peaches. Top with meringue and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for 12 to 15 minutes. Let cool, garnish with additional sliced peaches and serve. Six to eight servings.

Cream Filling: Mix together ¼ cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons flour. Add 1 cup milk gradually and cook over hot water, stirring constantly for 3 to 5 minutes or until thickened. Cover and cook for 10 minutes longer. Add a little of this mixture to 2 slightly beaten egg yolks, beat well and return to the first mixture. Cook for 1 minute longer, stirring constantly. Add 2 teaspoons butter and ½ teaspoon vanilla and allow to cool.

To make the meringue, beat 2 egg whites until stiff. Beat in 3 tablespoons sugar and a few grains salt.

Whether you pick your squash from the vine in your Victory garden or take it from the vegetable rack in your favorite market, you will find it will provide a delicious dish. The variety of squash doesn't matter so much. It is the appetizing way in which you cook it, whether it is as a vegetable dish or as a flavorsome pudding or pie

Save Fat

The necessity for saving fat is no laughing matter or one that we can afford to be indifferent about. A single tablespoon of fat means ammunition for five bullets. Are you going to allow one of our soldiers to go defenseless because you haven't made the effort to save waste fat?

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Different For Dinner—Meat Biscuit Rolls

Here's a wonderful way to give your family a hearty meat meal even if you're low on red points. You need only 1 lb. of ground beef, pork or lamb to make enough of these filling meat biscuit rolls to serve 5 or 6 people.

If you want to be sure of top quality and fine flavor look for the Armour Star brand on whatever meat you buy.

RECIPE: In a frying pan brown 1 lb. ground meat, ½ cup chopped onion, ½ cup chopped green pepper in 3 tbsps. Cloverbloom Butter or drippings.

Make biscuit dough by sifting 2 cups flour, ½ tsp. salt, 3 tsps. baking powder. Cut in ¼ cup Armour's Star Lard and add ½ cup cold milk slowly until the ingredients are moist. Roll out on a floured board to about ¼ inch thickness. Brush with melted meat drippings. Spread with meat mixture and roll like jelly roll. If dough is too soft, chill in refrigerator first, then cut in 1½ inch slices. Place in greased pan, cut side up, brush tops with melted butter. Bake 20-25 minutes at 450° F. Serve with brown gravy or mushroom sauce. 5-6 servings.

Prepared Mixes Quick Way To Delicious Dishes

The prepared mixes can be a great help to the busy homemaker. And what homemaker isn't busy these days? Why are these mixes an aid? There are five good answers—save time, save food, extremely versatile, easy to use, and assure good results.

Waffle mix can be used for making shortcakes as well as for waffles. Try peach shortcake by this method of the prepared mix. Prepare waffles according to directions on the package. Bake until very crisp. Brush with butter or margarine. Cut in sections. Pile sweetened, peeled peaches between and on top of two of the sections. Serve with cream. Serves four.

The pancake mixes can be used to make a substantial supper service. When you have some leftover meat use it with pancakes for a supper dish. Prepare the pancake batter as per the directions on the package. Add 2 cups chopped, cooked leftover meat. Cook on grill as you do pancakes. Serve hot with leftover gravy, or sirup if preferred.

When you want to make a delicious dessert in record time, try the prepared gingerbread mix. You will never go back to measuring flour and spices to bake gingerbread from scratch, once you have tried this short cut to delicious gingerbread. To aid in "hurry-up" cooking, the maker of these ready-mixes has added muffin mix. Five minutes is the preparation time from box to batter bowl to muffin tins. Nothing to add to the contents of the box but one and a half cups of water.

But you can do other things with the muffin mix than make muffins. You can turn the batter into coffee cakes. Before placing the muffin tins in the oven, sprinkle with brown sugar blended with flour, cinnamon and butter.

The mix can also be used to form a stiff dough to cover a meat pie, a fruit cobbler or any kind of a cobbler. Make tea muffins from the mix by substituting orange juice as a part of the required liquid, and some grated rind of the orange, and the result will be tea muffins, gloriously flavored with orange, and also of an attractive orange color.

These Women!

"Now that you've got a wedding dress, I suppose you'll look around for material for a divorce suit."

Toothbrush Technique

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

We all blithely take a lot of things on trust, which is a tribute to the general honesty of American manufacturing methods. You have your favorite tooth powder or paste and your neighbor has his—a different one—and you both put this mixture in your mouth every morning and probably swallow some of it, and yet you probably haven't the faintest idea what chemicals are in it.

I doubt whether your doctor knows what ingredients are in his tooth powder or paste. The basis of most tooth powders, if you want to know, is powdered soap. Oh! they put other things in it, but good old soap cleans your teeth as well as cleans your skin. And the basis of most tooth pastes is glycerine and powdered soap. Sometimes tragacanth, which is a kind of mucilage, perfectly harmless, naturally. In fact, if you want an elegant tooth powder, take this prescription to your druggist.

Here is the prescription:

|---|---|
| Calcium carbonate | 50 parts |
| Tricalcium phosphate | 16 " |
| Sodium bicarbonate | 6 " |
| Zinc peroxide | 10 " |
| Sugar | 10 " |
| Powdered soap, enough to make | 100 " |

|---|---|
| Calcium carbonate | 32 parts |
| Kaolin | 4 " |
| Soap powder | 16 " |
| Saccharin | 0.2 " |
| Glycerin | 24 " |
| Water enough to make | 100 " |

The American Dental Association has just published some researches by Drs. Epstein and Tainter, of San Francisco, on the effectiveness of a series of dental preparations ordinarily obtainable in a drug store. The particular point they wished to determine was how abrasive they were. Several years ago, in fact at the beginning of this century, it was considered that tooth powders should have rough, abrasive particles in order to clean the organic matter from the teeth.

This idea, combined with the habit then in vogue of brushing the teeth crosswise, probably did a good deal of harm. It was proved by Miller, in 1907, that tooth powders could be too abrasive, and that exposure of the gum margins and devitalization resulted. Precipitated chalk containing harsh impurities wore the dentin away and cut the teeth rapidly.

The research mentioned above was conducted on strictly standardized lines. A machine was used to do the brushing with equal force.

In general the conclusions were that no commercial dentifrice now on the market contains too much abrasive. In general they are all beneficial and harmless and about equally so. The important thing is to brush the teeth up and down and in a rotary fashion in order to reduce abrasion.

Hartley, Noted Painter, Dies In Maine at 66

Marsden Hartley, 66, internationally known painter of marines and landscapes, some of which are owned in Washington by the Phillips Memorial Gallery, died at Ellsworth, Me., yesterday.

He was a bachelor and left no immediate relatives. He was born in Lewiston, Me., but spent much of his life in New York.

Hartley for nearly 30 years had an annual one-man show in New York. His paintings won him prizes, the latest a $2500 Government competition last March.

In 1930 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship and spent a year painting in Mexico. He studied at the National Academy in New York shortly after the turn of the century and later in Europe.

F. E. Cunningham Rites Tentatively Set for Tomorrow

Tentative funeral arrangements for Frank Ellsworth Cunningham, 80, clerk of the District Supreme Court for 10 years before his retirement in 1936, have been set for tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Westminster, Md. Cunningham died Tuesday at his home in Westminster. Final arrangements are pending the arrival of his son, George M. Cunningham from Pasadena, Calif.

Mr. Cunningham was employed by the District Supreme Court from 1903 until ill health forced his retirement in 1936. He became clerk of the court in 1926.

A native of Westminster, Mr. Cunningham served in the office of Senator Goldsboruogh of Maryland and in the Baltimore City Customs House before coming to Washington.

While in the District he was clerk of the practice court of the Georgetown University law school and was the school's assistant treasurer. He was a deacon of St. Paul's Lutheran Church and former president of the church council. He was also on the governing board of the Lutheran Home and was a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Anna Motter Cunningham, his son, and a brother, John E. Cunningham, all of Westminster.

F. O. Hewitt Rites Are Set for Today

Requiem Mass for Francis Otto Hewitt, 50, native and former resident of the Lay Hill neighborhood of Montgomery County, Md., who died at his home in Alexandria on Tuesday, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. The Rev. J. Gilbert Hart, pastor of the church, will be celebrant and burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery, near Rockville.

Mr. Hewitt, who was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hewitt, is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Edmonia Gardiner, of Rockville; two sons, Francis O. Hewitt, jr., and James T. Hewitt, both of Alexandria, and a sister, Mrs. Raymond Harriss, of Washington. He was a nephew of Capt. Frank L. Hewitt, of Silver Spring.

Mrs. Churchill Visits Tomb of Unknown Soldier

Mrs. Winston Churchill made a pilgrimage yesterday to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery, where she placed a wreath on the white marble memorial.

The wife of the British Prime Minister was accompanied by her daughter, Mary, and Lieut. Col. Chester Hammond, White House aide.

While at the tomb, Miss Churchill, a subaltern in the British Auxiliary Transport Service, spied three members of the WAC, went over and introduced herself, then called her mother to talk with them. The three WACS were: Lieut. Josephine Azzolina, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Capt. Helene Fontaine, New York, and Lieut. Willa Mizell, Texarkana, Tex.

Peace Rumors Report Major Move by Italians

London, Sept. 2 (AP).—A fresh crop of rumors poured into London today saying a major Italian peace move is imminent and, while no official confirmation was available, it appeared that both the Allies and the Axis might be playing a propagandistic guessing game.

There appeared no doubt that many of the rumors springing from European sources were inspired by the Germans, and one view held here was that these were feelers through which the Nazis hoped to learn what if any peace moves had been made by Italy.

Drought Ruins 40% of Calvert Tobacco Crop

By the Associated Press

Prince Frederick, Md., Sept. 2.—Calvert County farmers reported today that approximately 45 per cent of the corn crop and 40 per cent of the tobacco had been damaged in what was termed the worst drought in the county's history.

The droughts of 1930-31 were of longer duration, for there was little rainfall throughout the year, whereas an abundance of rain fell last winter and spring. However, the 1943 summer drought has been accompanied by intense heat with the temperature over 90 degrees almost every day since June.

With the exception of a few victory gardens, nearly all of them in the county are a total loss. Early potato yields were good, but the later tuber crop is a failure.

A slight rain during the past weekend benefited only grass and falling streams and wells, and the Calvert County water supply remains "very low," farmers report.

Ex-Convict Held In Connection With Murder of WAC

Indianapolis, Sept. 2 (AP).—Saul A. Rabb, chief deputy Marion County prosecutor, announced tonight that Robert De Armond, 40-year-old Claypool Hotel steward, who once served a five-year prison term for rape, has been arrested in connection with the slaying of Corpl. Maoma L. Ridings of Camp Atterbury in the hotel Saturday night.

Charged with vagrancy, he was placed under $1000 bond.

Detective Lieut. Noel Jones said a vagrancy charge filed Tuesday night against Robert Wolfington, 22-year-old hotel bellboy who has been held for questioning, would be dropped tomorrow and the youth released. He had reported delivering ice to Corpl. Ridings' room a few hours before her body was found.

Wheeler Asks President to Define Surrender Terms

Helena, Mont., Sept. 2 (AP).—Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana tonight called on President Roosevelt to "define unconditional surrender" for the people of the Axis nations.

In a telegram the Senator said, in part:

"As a non-Catholic I want you to know that I am whole-heartedly in accord with the statement of Pope Pius XII that 'the soul of all people is revolting against violence' and that 'people who have suffered so much do not ask for anything but peace, bread and work.' The Pope, as you know, is in a position to have knowledge of the sentiments of the people in enemy countries as well as Allied countries.

"The above statement coupled with the Russian offer of peace in the event that the people in other totalitarian countries of Europe throw out their dictators and all that they have stood for, leads me to respectfully suggest to you that the time has now come for you to define unconditional surrender and appeal to the people of Europe to abandon the false path of militarism, intolerance and brutality."

Ripley, W. Va., Made Air Mail Line Stop

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) yesterday authorized All American Aviation, Inc., to add Ripley, W. Va., as a stop on its route between Charleston and Spencer, W. Va. All American Aviation now provides pick-up mail and express service to 115 cities in 6 States.

The board originally denied the application for authority to serve Ripley, but reconsidered and granted it after the Postoffice Department said the volume of mail was sufficient to warrant the service.

Steinbeck Tells of Senator Posing at Graves

By John Steinbeck

A NORTH AFRICAN POST (Via London).—When the technical sergeant came through the door the M. P. in the white helmet saluted him satirically and said: "How are you, cap'n?"

The technical sergeant grinned wearily at him, walked through into the wallboard office and set his camera down on the floor. He sat down in a hard chair and got out a cigarette. Private First Class Hogan looked up from the album of stills he was thumbing through.

"Hi, George," he said, "been out working?"

"Yeah," said George.

"More Senator stuff?"

"Yeah," said George.

"I wouldn't mind that job," said Hogan. "You've got to go to that pasha's palace and set on cushions and eat stuff with the Senators. I hear that Sultan, or whatever he was, give each one of them Senators a rug. That is really important dough. That so?"

"Yeah," said George.

"But you didn't get no rug, huh?"

"No," said George.

"Say, what's eatin' you? Don't you like takin' pitchers of Senators?"

"A Little Fed Up"

The technical sergeant opened his camera case and took out the boxes of exposed film and laid them on the table.

"I just got a little fed up," he said.

"Didn't you ride on camels and take rides in stuff or shoot off no guns today?"

"No," said George. "I went to a cemetery."

"With a Senator?"

"With a Senator, sure."

"What did he want there?" Private First Class Hogan asked.

"Wanted his picture in a cemetery to send home to the papers. He though it up by himself, and now they're all going to want to do it."

"Look," said George. "I worked on stinking papers. I've been a tabloid man. I've shot pictures of blondes for gentle blackmail, but sometimes I get tired."

"What is this?" Hogan asked.

He Wanted a Cemetery

"Well this Senator, he wanted a cemetery. We got a nice one all laid out, but it's 50 or 60 miles away, and this Senator he wanted one in close because he's got a date at 4 o'clock. Well, we haven't got a big cemetery right in close. The only one we've got is that one just out of town on the hill, where they buried those 28 that got killed in that train wreck?"

"You remember, some Arab left the switch open and this train runs bang into a freight and 28 G. I's get bumped off. Well, they buried them back on that hill outside of town. Twenty-eight nice white little crosses. They're strictly palookas, these guys, shovel soldiers, but they made them a nice little cemetery because they died for their country. Well, that's where I took my Senator."

"Well, what's wrong with that, George?"

"Nothing, I guess. This guy first wants me to set up so it will look like a lot more than 28, you know, keep the lens down so you can't see where the crosses stop. That means I've got to get up on top of the car and shoot down on him, and it was hotter than hell in the sun this afternoon."

"Don't I know it," said Hogan. "Say, how'd you like a schooner of Milwaukee beer, good and cold?"

"Shut up," said George. "Anyways, I took him two profiles, one on each side looking down and sad, and then I had to get up among the crosses so I could take him full-faced looking down and sad, and then—well, hell, you might just as well hear it. Then—he got down on his knees and he says, 'How does this look? Do you think this will make a nice picture?'

"So I said, 'Sure, wonderful.'

"So then I took about 20 of him on his knees looking sad. A bunch of Arabs and about 40 Wop kids came gathering around and they thought it was pretty funny, but you couldn't stop this Senator. He just went on looking sad. He got into the mood so good that it was a quarter to 4 before we finished up and then he gave me hell because he's afraid he's going to miss his date."

"Who was the date?"

"I don't know. Anyway he don't want a camera along."

The technical sergeant took out his camera and wiped the lens with a handkerchief. "Sure was dusty out there," he said.

Private First Class Hogan asked, "Well, what you cracking off about? They told you to do it, so you did it, and why beef about it?"

"You don't understand," said George. "This Senator thought it up by himself. We sneaked out, I'm not supposed to tell anybody. He wants to surprise the rest."

"I don't get it," said Hogan.

"Look—the others know about it already. They're all going to want cemetery pictures. I'll be shooting them on their knees all week, and they won't be satisfied with any little old 28. They are going to want to get out to the McCoy where we really get crosses."

"Course, it's hot weather," Hogan said. "But I still don't see what it's to you."

George sighed, "I don't know," he said. "I guess I just got a little bit tired. There were a couple of pretty nice guys in that train wreck—palookas, but nice guys. I guess I'm just a little tired."

Court Action Hinted in N. Y. Political Mixup

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 2.—Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio, whose nomination for a State Supreme Court post the district attorney said was aided by a "czar of the slot machine racket," indicated today he would take court action to prevent Republicans and Democrats from repudiating him as their candidate.

The Republicans already have named their new choice, picking George Frankenthaler, 57, New York City attorney and labor mediator, at a hastily reconvened judicial convention last night, a week after choosing Aurelio.

The executive committee of Tammany Hall, with Leader Michael J. Kennedy offering the resolution to repudiate its original nomination of Aurelio, called its convention into session again tomorrow.

Thought to Be Way Out

The reconvening of the conventions, which Aurelio today termed illegal, was decided upon by both parties as the way out of the dilemma created when District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said the nomination of Aurelio was brought about by Frank Costello, whom Hogan described as a racketeer.

Aurelio indicated today he would challenge the second conventions, for in a letter to Chief Magistrate Henry H. Curran asking for a leave of absence without pay until November 5, three days after the election, he said "I shall be engaged in legal proceedings because of the situation thus created." The leave was granted.

Aurelio had said previously that he would not quit the race and that he had known Costello as a reputable businessman.

When the reconvening of the conventions was first proposed, Howard Cohen, president of the city board of elections, said there was some question of their legality, but that the board would not rule until the matter was before it officially.

PERCHED Forward or Worn Backward, TINY HATS Get Big Attention

You'll "oh" and "ah" over the new Fall hats—but your sighs won't be measured by their size! For autumn bonnets are brief as a wink—petite—miniature—little, but oh, my! . . . what an eye-following, heart-throbbing stir they cause! Designed with both "up" and "down" hair-do's in mind. Wear 'em perched on your forehead if you sweep your locks up. Sweep 'em back on your head if you wear your crowning glory down. In black and glorious new fall colors.

(C) Petite Pill-Box . . . so provocative with its loops of velvet. Black and Fall colors... 8.50

(D) The "Suit" Brim . . . wear it well forward on your brow—see what dash it gives your suit! 8.50

In the Black of the Night The Star Twinkling Glitter of Sequins
